COURSE DESCRIPTION
This class is a study of the work of a major author. For this course, we will focus on the life and works of Ernest Hemingway, whose terse, clean prose is said to have transformed American literature. His life was as dramatic as his works and this course will also emphasize his personal biography. His adventures as a sportsman, soldier, and war correspondent, as well as his torrid personal life, his ultra-masculine persona, and his battle with depression and alcoholism made him a larger-than-life figure in the history of the twentieth century. This class will range from looking at some of his most respected works (his first novel and his last), to lesser-known texts. We will emphasize his short fiction, his autobiographical sketches of life in Paris after the first world war, and his relationship to Cuba, which is of particular interest given our own geographical and cultural relationship to the island nation at the University of Tampa. In addition, this class comes with a “W” designation, which means that its writing level is intensive: Students in this class will do weekly response writings, and write three papers that demonstrate different types of skills: a close reading exercise on a short text, an individually conducted project on the Hemingway archive that asks students to do independent research on primary sources, and a longer, critical essay that engages with scholarship as it seeks to make an original argument about one of Hemingway’s novels. (These longer papers will be workshopped in draft form. Failure to participate in the draft workshop will result in a grade penalty of 2/3 of a letter grade.) Students are expected to attend and participate in class discussions of the material, and grades in the course will be calculated based on the following metric:

Grade Breakdown:
Multi-media project 15%
Close reading paper 15%
Hemingway archive project 20%
Critical essay 25%
Final exam 10%
Attendance and participation 15%

Expectations for 300-level courses:

- Are primarily for majors and minors
- Are specialized in forms or cultural eras
- Have pre-requisites of FYW 101 and one 200-level LIT course
- Include assigned reading of scholarly [secondary] texts
- Require writing assignments which synthesize primary and secondary texts
- Teaches the process of writing in the discipline
- Have teachers who are actively engaged in the area or field of the course

Targeted Course Objectives:

- Students will further their understanding of 20th century American literature by studying in detail one of its iconic authors.
- Students will practice close reading skills as well as research skills and integrate both primary and secondary source material into paper assignments.
- Students will hone their communication skills in course discussion and their organization skills in collaborative assignments that task the students to delegate responsibility, stay focused and on track, and be team players.
- Students will improve as critical readers of literary texts; as researchers who engage with a variety of resources, including online digital archives and scholarly databases; and as writers, with weekly assignments to perform outside of class and the opportunity to workshop major paper drafts in class

Books to buy:

* A Farewell to Arms
* A Moveable Feast
* The Sun Also Rises
* The Old Man and the Sea
ASSIGNMENTS:

Weekly writings 20%
In the first weeks of the course, students will be put in writing groups, with whom they will work closely for the remainder of the term. Writing groups will exchange paper drafts for the final paper as a required exercise, but they may also elect to swap drafts on other assignments, if they wish. This will undoubtedly have a benefit for students’ development as writers (and there may be an incentive for their grade.) In addition, writing groups will work together to produce a weekly cluster of responses. In essence, you will have a visible discussion with each other about the texts in advance of the class (on BB). You may decide amongst yourselves how posts are to be organized.

Attendance and participation 10%
This class emphasizes student-centered learning, and attendance will be recorded for each class period and students will be given a weekly grade (visible on blackboard grade-book each week) based on their participation in class discussion. Students need to come prepared, having read the material and ready to engage vigorously in class discussion. Failing to speak in class, or seeming distracted will have a negative impact on one’s grade. Technological distractions, like texting or being otherwise occupied on one’s laptop, will be VERY damaging to one’s weekly participation grade. Missed classes will only be forgiven for a valid medical reason with supplied documentation, or for an academic reason with prior approval given by the professor.

Final exam 10%
The final exam will be given during the scheduled exam period at the end of the term and will consist of identifications, key terms, and an in-class essay. The form of the exam will be explained in the final weeks of the class.

Close reading paper 15%
This is a short paper that will be due in the early part of the term. It asks the students to choose one of the shorter texts we have read, either a short story or a selection from the autobiographical sketches of A Moveable Feast, and to write an analysis of the text that is entirely original, with no consultation of outside resources. We will discuss how to perform a close reading in advance of this assignment’s due date. No sources other than the text under investigation should be cited in these papers. The point here is a close attention to the language, imagery, syntax, and overall effect of the short text. As a result, correct citation of the text and deep engagement with quotations is a must in these assignments.

Length: 1000 words. Due Date: F Oct 4

The Hemingway Archive Project paper 20% asks the student to find a primary text, such as a newspaper article written by Hemingway, a photograph of the man, a letter he wrote or received, a contemporary book review, or other ephemera, which are catalogued by various repositories online. In a short paper, students must describe the object they have identified, and explain how it relates to a specific writing we have read in the course, and unpack how it may shed light on the text at hand. Students may choose to look at the archives of the Toronto Star, for which Hemingway wrote; http://ehto.thestar.com/; The JFK Collection; https://www.jfklibrary.org/Research/The-Ernest-Hemingway-Collection.aspx; the Illinois State library, which has digitized files of his early life, http://www.idaillinois.org/ui/custom/default/collection/default/resources/custompages/bin/edi.php?collection=p16614coll27&startrec=1&startrec=1; or the collection of Hemingway’s Letters at Penn State, https://libraries.psu.edu/findingaids/6189.htm; which have also been published in book form. Students should also feel free to consult with our talented staff at the library, and to reach out to the research librarians at other institutions to see if digital copies of files can be shared. Students are encouraged to share their ideas with their writing group members in the weeks leading up to this paper’s due date. A consultation with the professor in office hours is advised in advance of writing this paper to ensure that the chosen topic is workable. Students will be asked to share their findings with the class as a whole in informal presentations.

Length: 1000 words Due Date: Friday Nov 1

Critical essay paper 25 % This should be a traditional research paper with an original thesis. Students should select one of the novels read in the course to treat in their paper. They should research the critical and scholarly reception of the work (that is, what book reviewers thought of the novel at the time it was published, and how it has been regarded by literary scholars since) and draw from this research in making an original argument about the book. Citations should include scholarly articles on the book as well as the student’s own engagement with the text in the creation of an argument. For example, Hemingway has been called a misogynist, a homophobe, a latent homosexual, and an anti-semite. One approach to this assignment (but certainly not the only one) might be to find a scholar with whom you can argue in making claims about your own reading of a text. Alternatively, students might research the way scholars have previously addressed a topic like masculinity, Cuban culture, or the role of the war and PTSD in Hemingway’s novels and extend and expand, agree or disagree with the extant scholarship, drawing on quotes from Hemingway’s work to make their case. At least three works must be cited, in addition to Hemingway, in the bibliography. Students will shape their arguments by working closely with their writing groups, and a mandatory draft workshop will be conducted in class. Students must participate in order to avoid grade penalties.

Length: 3000 words. Due Date: F Dec 6

Digital Multi-media project

These are primarily digital, shareable projects that teach something about the historic context during which Hemingway produced one of his works. For example, in the past students have created podcasts, yelp pages, Instagram accounts, websites, videos and more. The objective here is to create a public-facing shareable document that might inform other students working on these texts in future classes, and even at other universities. Projects can take diverse forms but must have a bibliography of five sources

Schedule

NOTE: exact page numbers for readings are not given here as we may all be working from different versions, and so that we can adjust and slow down the pace if needs be. If you miss class, it is your responsibility to get notes from a classmate.
Please do not email Professor Lauro to ask what you have missed or to have the reading assignment repeated. You will become close with your writing groups over the term and should seek this type of information from your peers.

Reporting Sexual Violence/ Title IX Matters

Sexual violence includes nonconsensual sexual contact and nonconsensual sexual intercourse (which is any type of sexual contact without your explicit consent, including rape), dating violence, sexual harassment, sexual exploitation, domestic violence, and stalking. You may reach out for confidential help (see contact info below) or report an incident for investigation.

If you choose to write or speak about an incident of sexual violence and disclose that this violence occurred while you were a UT student, the instructor is obligated to report the incident to the Title IX Deputy Coordinator for Students. The purpose of this report is to provide a safe and nondiscriminatory environment for all students. The Deputy Coordinator or his or her designee will contact you to let you know about the resources, accommodations, and support services at UT and possibilities for holding the perpetrator accountable. If you do not want the Title IX Coordinator notified, instead of disclosing this information to your instructor, you can speak confidentially with the individuals listed below. They can connect you with support services and discuss options for holding the perpetrator accountable.

There is an exception to this required reporting for preventative education programs and public awareness events or forums. While the instructor is not required to report disclosures during these instances, unless you make or initiate a complaint, during these programs or events, the instructor or another University official will ensure that the students are aware of the available resources at UT, such as counseling, health, and mental health services, and it will provide information about Title IX, how to file a Title IX complaint, how to make a confidential report, and the procedure for reporting sexual violence.

For more information, see The University of Tampa's Title IX resources at http://www.ut.edu/uploadedFiles/Academics/Provost/Title%20IX.pdf and https://www.ut.edu/studentconduct/titleix/.

Saunders Writing Center
The Saunders Writing Center provides free tutoring to all students interested in improving their writing abilities. The Center tutors will assist with all aspects of writing. For example, they help students to identify paper topics and generate ideas, plan and organize drafts, rewrite, and edit. The Center’s purpose is not to correct or proofread final drafts, but to aid in learning strategies that good writers use during the process. The Center, in Plant Hall 323, is available for assistance with any writing project for any class. Hours are posted. Students may make an appointment or simply drop by (ext. 6244).
