MRS. DOROTHY D. HOUGHTON

Graduates to Hear Foreign Aid Official At Commencement

Mrs. Dorothy Deemer Houghton, assistant to Harold E. Stassen, director of the Foreign Operations Administration, and former president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, will be the speaker at the 21st annual commencement exercises of the University Friday, June 4, at 7 P.M. at the Plant Park Band Shell.

Appointed to her present post in April, 1953, Mrs. Houghton brought to her complex duties a long experience in the field of philanthropic endeavor. She served as president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs from 1950 to 1952, and under her leadership during this period substantial assistance was made available through the Federation's International Good Will Program to help meet the needs of refugees in many parts of the world. Among other undertakings were relief projects providing more than $325,000 for Korean Relief, more than 26,000 pounds of cloth for Youth Centers in Western Germany, and assistance for needy groups in Greece, Iran, and the Philippines.

To further the Federation's International Good Will Program, Mrs. Houghton led World Cooperation Tours to Europe, the Near East, Mexico, and South America. Solomon J. (Sol) Fleischman, Tampa Daily Times sports writer and chief announcer for radio station WDAE, will be awarded the University of Tampa Medal for Achievement in Sports Reporting at the 21st spring commencement Friday, June 4.

A veteran of all phases of broadcasting but a specialist in sports, Mr. Fleischman joined the announcing staff of WDAE in 1928, and a week later gave his first play-by-play report of a football game. He has served station WDAE continuously since that time, except for three and a half years of wartime Coast Guard duty as damage control officer of the U.S.S. Huron.

Since 1946, Mr. Fleischman has made frequent trips to fishing sites and fishing camps to provide material for his daily evening broadcast and the 7:30 "Morning Chats" with members of the fishing fraternity. He is also fishing editor of the Tampa Daily Times and writes a daily fishing column for that newspaper.

WORDS OF WISDOM — TO THE GRADUATING CLASS OF 1954

You leave the University now with a diploma in your hands and high hopes and bright dreams in your hearts. The diploma is a parchment symbol of our approval of your conduct and academic achievements here, but the most important tests are yet ahead of you.

Life examines us daily. In recent months, perhaps, you have often wondered: "What does life hold for me?" The world now reverses the question and asks: "What have you to offer?"

Graduation is appropriately called "commencement," for it is the beginning of a way of life that attempts to prove that college training is a good investment.

Your professional training, acquired skills and native endowments, if used wisely, will bring you a comfortable living. Your real character, however, will be revealed in what you contribute to the enrichment and welfare of humanity beyond your professional responsibilities.

Whatever you do, wherever you go, your personal happiness and success will be supported by our prayers. God bless you always—all ways.

Sincerely,
Ellwood C. Nance

ing between the Netherlands and the United States. More recently King Paul of Greece conferred on her the Gold Cross of the Royal Order of Beneficence, the insignia and diploma being presented by Ambassador Politis in Washington.

Mrs. Houghton retired from the presidency of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in May, 1952, to take part in the campaign for General Eisenhower's nomination and election. She was chosen a presidential elector by the Iowa State Republican Convention, and in January, 1953, was elected vice president of the Electoral College, the first woman to be made an officer of the Electoral College.

The Office for Refugees, Migration, and Voluntary Assistance directed by Mrs. Houghton comprises three divisions: the Escapee Program Division, the Voluntary Foreign Aid Division, and the Intergovernmental Refugee Programs Division.

The Escapee Program Division administers care and resettlement assistance on behalf of escapees from behind the Iron Curtain. This activity is undertaken in full contact with private voluntary welfare agencies and with the governments in the countries of asylum to help meet the immediate personal needs of the escapees after their arrival in the countries of asylum and to aid in their permanent resettlement on a self-sufficient basis in the countries of the free world.

The Voluntary Foreign Aid Division serves as the initial point of contact with private voluntary welfare agencies which seek information on, or desire to participate in refugee relief, migration, or other related activities of the Foreign Operations Administration. This division also helps to coordinate assistance and relief efforts undertaken by the United States Government and voluntary agencies on behalf of refugees in other countries, and administers ocean freight subsidies for relief supplies being sent overseas by the agencies.

The Intergovernmental Refugee Programs Division administers the United States participation in the Intergovernmental Committee for European Migration. Member governments cooperate through the Migration Committee to assist in the amelioration of the overpopulation problem in Europe by providing ocean transportation to countries in other less populated areas for emigrants who would otherwise be unable to leave Europe.

This division is also concerned with the conduct of United States participation in the assistance and war relief programs through the United Nations: (1) U.N. Korean Reconstruction Agency, to provide emergency relief to the people of Korea and to help them repair the devastation caused by war; (2) U.N. Relief and Works Agency for Palestine, to provide relief assistance for the Arab refugees from Palestine, and to assist in their reintegration in the countries of the Near East; (3) U.N. International Children's Emergency Fund, to provide emergency relief for needy children in wartorn areas, and long-range maternity and child welfare programs on behalf of mothers and children in underdeveloped countries.

Shortly after her appointment as assistant to the director of the Foreign Operations Administration, Mrs. Houghton went to Geneva, where she served as Adviser with the United States delegation at the Fifth Session of the Migration Committee. Before her return to this country she toured West Germany and Berlin, visiting refugee camps and talking with refugees and officials engaged in the administration of reception and relief activities. In October, 1953, she went to Venice as a member of the United States delegation to the Sixth Session of the Migration Committee.

A native of Iowa, Mrs. Houghton has been active in many civic and community affairs in her home state. She has served on the Iowa State Board of Education, and is former president of the Iowa Library Association, Iowa director for the National Association of Parliamentarians, and vice president of the National Society for Crippled Children and Adults. She is a graduate of Wellesley College and has received honorary degrees from American University, Washington, D. C., and other institutions.

gia, he was commissioned ensign pilot in June, 1944, at Corpus Christi, Tex., and subsequently served in Squadron V. S. 7 in the Alaskan and Aleutian Area, and with Squadron V. S. 52 in the Marshall Islands, Central Pacific. He was released from active duty in October, 1944, as Lieutenant (jg), U.S.N.R.

While director of public relations for the University, Mr. Whitehead gave addresses before numerous academic, religious and other groups. His ability as a speaker, an organizer and a leader was soon discovered by other colleges and by business organizations, and he was offered other positions at a much larger salary. In 1950 the president of the National Conference of Christians and Jews heard him and offered him a position at twice the salary he was receiving at the University of Tampa plus the opportunity for rapid advancement. Mr. Whitehead was so loyal to the University that he would not accept the position until President Nance encouraged him to do so.

He joined the National Conference of Christian and Jews as regional director for Florida in 1950, and because of his outstanding work was soon advanced to the national office in New York and the associate directorship of financial development of the Conference. His present status is liaison officer between the Conference and Mr. Benson Ford, vice president of the Ford Motor Co. and honorary president of the National Conference of Christians and Jews and chairman of the Special Gifts Campaign.

Mr. Whitehead is married and has two children. Mrs. Whitehead, the former Celeste Dervaes of Tampa, is also a graduate of the University of Tampa.

a dance scheduled for the same evening.

The play is directed by Franklin Moody.

"Pygmalion" is the story of a young flower girl who has spent her life roaming around the streets of London selling flowers to gentlemen and ladies. By accident she meets Mr. Higgins, famed linguist, and persuades him to teach her to speak like a "lady in a flower shop."

Mr. Higgins does more than this. He teaches her to be a lady, and attends a magnificent ball escorting the young woman. Her speech and mannerisms are perfect, and she is successfully considered a duchess.

EIGHT STUDENTS NAMED TO UNIVERSITY'S HALL OF FAME

Four women and four men of the Class of 1954 have been added to the University of Tampa's Hall of Fame, it was announced today.

In releasing the names of the new additions, Bob Eustace, Moroccan Editor, said that it was a very difficult task to select those to be included in this most coveted honor on campus. There were others, Eustace said, that barely missed the Hall of Fame.

It is a tradition of the University each year to select the most outstanding seniors for this honor. The decisions are based on the student's interest in the University, scholarship, participation in campus activities, membership in various organizations, athletics, achievements in more than one field of endeavor, and assistance to his fellow students.

Those included in this year's Hall of Fame are Jayne Anderson, organizations and activities; Patricia Neff, scholastics and organizations; Bob Hancock, activities and publications; George Felke, government and organizations; Charlie Harris, athletics; Jack McClendon, organizations and activities; Mitzi Hoffer, activities and organizations; Ann Shaffer, organizations and activities.

CAMELS AGREE WITH MORE PEOPLE THAN ANY OTHER CIGARETTE!

The brightest moment of our lives has taken a shade of darkness. The hour is at hand we thought would never come and now that it is here, some of us wish the sands of time would stay themselves, even if for just a few more moments.

Four years ago (or more) the present June graduating class enrolled at this University. Various reasons prompted its members to come here. Some live in Tampa, thus the convenience was attractive. Others are from nearby areas, easy to reach over the weekend. But those whose homes are out of state had different motives varying from the climate to athletic scholarships.

Regardless of the originating point, our purpose was the same—secure a college education. Here, above everything else, we have learned to live with people. Is there a more important phase of education? Also, instructions were issued which, because of the dreams we had for the future, were usually carried out to the best of our abilities. Many times we stumbled, certainly. When we did, we resolved to hurdle temptations and obstacles we faced or were put into our path. To some degree we kept those resolutions.

As we take leave of the campus, we do so with confidence and eagerness, but with humility and thoughtfulness. Perhaps we will use the not-quite-dry diploma as a door opener. Yet, many of us have already made the necessary contacts for work — not a position. Realizing the mere fact we have met the necessary qualifications as set forth by this institution for graduation does in no way entitle us to special privileges and considerations, we gladly accept the challenges and opportunities presented to us.

As we look back over the years we have studied on this campus, there come to our minds the disturbing thoughts of yesteryears. Many times we saw or met those who proudly boasted they were self-made men. Their line of conversation ran contrary to ours because we believed a college education a vital necessity. Not these people . . . "just a waste of time," they would always say. More than once, we were almost convinced they were right, but, deep in our heart there was the conviction we were on the right path, and we were reminded of this fact each day we listened to the radio or read the newspapers and other periodicals. The conclusion was always the same . . . If the world is a product today of the present self-made men, then let us study how to change the pattern of these people and get it back on a more livable basis.

No, we do not hold ourselves up as "world beaters" or the possessors of all the answers to modern problems. However, we do believe, given half a chance, there is a great possibility our ideas may prove more constructive and beneficial to all mankind than the majority of those which have apparently been to some degree detrimental to the human race. All the credit for any improvements we may be responsible for certainly should not go to us, but to the faculty and administrative staff of this University. Not only did they aid us in mental and physical development — their unselfish interest and cooperation in our behalf provided the inspiration which resulted in the continued initiative on our part to obtain the prize we have now received and to press forward to fulfill the remainder of our dreams.

To the underclassmen, we say sincerely, profit by our mistakes. Keep in sight at all times that goal you are striving for — it will be in the same place, only you will be the one to detour. Listen to those who have "been through the mill," shun those who seek to cover up their own shortcomings. Remember there is nothing impossible — just improbable. Have faith in yourselves and trust your own judgment. And, believe in your University, not just in thought, not just in words, but by application. — Bob Hancock, Class of '54

MATTER OF OPINION

Birmingham, Ala. (I.P.)—Objective tests are better than essay type examinations, a conference of southern educators decided recently at Florida State University. Dean Henry T. Shanks of Birmingham-Southern College, who attended the conference at the Tallahassee school, reported the group's conclusion on his return here.

"They decided the best test is the one that evaluates the student's factual information rather than his attitudes and beliefs," Dean Shanks reported. He personally did not agree in full with the edict of the 14-state conference, which was co-sponsored by the Educational Testing Service of Princeton, N.J.

The best method, he said, "is to get good teachers and give them a free rein. It is not so much what the testing program is," Dr. Shanks added, "as what the teacher does in the classroom."

SOUNDS INTERESTING

Lafayette, Ind. (I.P.)—Purdue University has adopted a new calendar for the 1954-55 academic year and the following years. This new calendar provides for a four day Thanksgiving vacation. Classes will end the Wednesday before Thanksgiving at 6 p.m., and will begin the following Monday at 7 a.m.

Because of the extended Thanksgiving holiday, school will start next year on a Thursday instead of Monday as has been the custom for many years. Orientation of new students will begin Friday, a week before classes start, and will continue through the following Wednesday. This breaks a long-standing tradition here. The orientation program usually started on Sunday so that parents could bring new students to the University over the week-end.

The new calendar will not lengthen the number of school days in the year. By closing school on a week day instead of Saturday as has been the policy in previous years, Christmas vacation will contain only two week-ends instead of the usual three. More time will be had between the end of Christmas vacation and the end of the fall semester. Easter vacation will be the same as usual.

The problem in extending the Thanksgiving vacation was finding a proper calendar in which there would be an equal number of school days. The new calendar was voted on and passed by the faculty. In this new calendar there is an equal division of school days. Classes will end one week later in the spring. The new calendar for the 1954-55 school year is as follows:

Friday-Wednesday, Sept. 17-22—Orientation of new students.

Thursday, Sept. 23—Classes begin.

Wednesday, Nov. 24, 6 p.m.—Thanksgiving vacation begins.

Monday, Nov. 29, 7 a.m.—Thanksgiving vacation ends.

Wednesday, Dec. 22, 6 p.m.—Christmas vacation begins.

Thursday, Jan. 6, 7 a.m.—Christmas vacation ends.

Saturday, Jan. 29, 12 noon—Classes end.

Thursday, Feb. 3—Second Semester begins.

Wednesday, April 6, 6 p.m.—Easter vacation begins.

Thursday, April 14, 7 a.m.—Easter vacation ends.

Wednesday, June 1, 6 p.m.—Classes end.

Sunday, June 5—Commencement

VALEDICTORIAN

KENNETH CHRISTENSEN

Dr. Nance, members of the faculty, members of the graduating class, and anyone else who may have joined the crowd here today to witness the crucifixion of Mr. Fabrizio and myself, I greet you.

Several months ago on a very popular television show a brand new and starry-eyed bride—one who had been married only a day or two—was called upon to identify a certain tune which had just been played. I don't recall the title of the music, but it was some song connected with weddings. Now this girl was a beautiful blonde, and like all blondes she was exercising her prerogative of being dumb—also quite dizzy. The master of ceremonies not wanting her to flunk out entirely, decided to coach her just a little to see if she could possibly think of the title. "What tune," he asked, "would you think it appro-

SALUTATORIAN

FELIX FABRIZIO

President Nance, Dean Rhodes, Members of the Faculty, Our Dear Families and Friends:

The Class of 1954 extends to all of you a warm and hearty welcome to our Class Day exercises.

As we welcome you here today, we of the graduating class feel that the truly significant occasions in our lives are somehow diffused with an almost ineffable pathos; that even the most joyous occasions are tinted with a kind of piercing poignancy. Unity of feeling is not characteristic of significant occasions. The child is no sooner born than the joys of the moment are clouded with concern and worry lest the child's future be neglected. The young couple are no sooner married than their bliss is subdued with the significance of their responsibilities.

So it is with us who graduate today. We rejoice much; yet, we have sorrow too. We rejoice in the knowledge that this day marks the culmination of four years of study and perseverance, and that we have acquired in these years something of true and lasting value.

Yet, a nameless sadness o'er us rolls. We shall miss our classmates and our good-fellowship in learning; we shall miss the courtesy and understanding of our administrators; and most of all, perhaps, we shall miss the kindly, gentle wisdom of our professors, who have been not only our teachers but also our mentors.

The levity of joy is also tempered with the gravity of responsibility. We go not into that brave new world described by Shakespeare in The Tempest, but rather, into that old, confused, and war-conscious one described in current headlines. Perhaps never before have so many devious and conflicting concepts of the good society held such sway in the hearts of men; perhaps at no other time has the need for wisdom and the right decision been so exigent.

Surely today's decisions are fraught with graver consequences than ever before, for today man has at his finger tips such dire implements of destruction as are capable of obliterating entire cities, countries, and perhaps even the human race itself. In these critical times, we of the graduating class are impressed with the need for our continued study and circumspection, and are keenly aware of our responsibilities in helping to make the right decisions in the active direction of our governments. We are confident, too, that our training here at the University of Tampa has

by MITZI HOFFER, '54
Chief Truthsayer

The year is 1964, and the season is Spring. We are back in dea' ole' Tampa just visiting and hoping we'll see some of our old friends. Days and years have come and gone — time has flown by and left in its wake heartaches and happiness — wealth and poverty.

We decided to stay at the Floridan Hotel and just as we pulled up to the entrance, a big Cadillac moved in behind us. A man quickly got out wearing a chauffeur's uniform, and bless our bones if it wasn't George Felke. We had always thought he'd be a quality checker for a moonshine company. He opened the door and his alcalde, Albert Cazin, stepped out wearing a tall silk hat and tails. He told us he was now unofficial mayor of Ybor City and invited us to attend the Latin Fiesta this week-end. He also reminded us that in his younger days he was Sr. Goucho at the Fiestas.

After checking in at the desk, the host rang a bell for the bellhop, and who should appear — none other than Richard Thomas. As Richard showed us our room, he told us of his achievements. He is now "head" bellhop. Also, he was real glad he majored in English because he can carry on intelligent conversations with his guests!

When we finally reached our room, we found that it was not quite ready, and that the chambermaid was giving it one final check. As we entered, she turned to leave and we realized it was Ann Shaffer. Gees, we always thought she'd make a fine dietician in some large hotel. We decided to take a shower and go out to eat. Being in a hurry because we had so many places to go, we stepped into an out-of-the-way place called "Eddie's Hash House."

We sat down at the counter and who did we see—face-to-face—but Eddie Casella. We could have guessed he'd own an eating place someday 'cus he was always slinging the hash back in the good old days. As the waitress approached us, we realized it was Liz Birge. We were really surprised to see her there as we had heard she was employed by a major Hollywood studio as a guidance expert for "The Dead End Kids." Liz told us that Ernest Siek, the famed mathematician, who has rewritten Einstein's Theory, comes here daily for lunch.

We left Eddie's, and as we walked down Franklin Street we saw a sign that used to read: "Chuck Arenth's Physical Culture School," but now the sign read: "Boyd F. Williams' Physical Culture and if you don't believe it, come in and see me." We ran in to see Boyd for a few minutes and he told us that one of his students, Ed Ballas, is teaching physical culture in a girls' school in Miami. And we remembered that at graduation time Ed wanted to be a coach desperately.

We finally left and started toward the middle of town and who sped past us in a Hillsborough County Sheriff's car but George Plomaritis. We always thought he'd be dean of boys at Brewster Vocational School. We passed a bakery and something smelled so good we just had to go back and get some pastry. As we entered, a bell on the door rang and a man came from behind the curtain. To our amazement it was Mr. Tony Provenzano. We were really glad to see Tony because he was always such an inspiration when we were in his cake-baking and food class. In fact, we hear some of the husbands hired Tony to help them in their time of need. Well, we bought a dozen doughnuts and went back to the hotel.

Just as we started up the steps, we saw a man crumple up a piece of paper and throw it clear across the lobby right into the waste can. He turned around and it was Marty Brooks. He said he just got some bad news. His wife had wired him from New York saying he'd have to get a job because she couldn't work and watch the six kids all at the same time. We went up to the room and changed our clothes and left immediately for the Jai-Alai fronton.

We met a tout, Joe Belluccio, in front taking bets who put the squeeze on us. After placing a few bets with him we went on inside. During intermission the maintenance man was changing light bulbs and who do you think it was? None other than "no step ladder," Chuck Jarczynski. We went over and asked him how he was. He said he hadn't been feeling too well lately—his doc said it was only growing pains.

We went to find our seats and found someone else occupying them. We were going to ask them to leave when we saw it was Mr. and Mrs. Robert Arthur Hathaway. They apologized for being in our seats by saying that they had snuck in the back door and had chosen their seats at random. We stayed to see a few games and then decided to go. We called a cab and the hacky turned out to be Maurice Conner.

He told us that it really takes brains to figure the mileage and fare and that he thought he might quit because it was so tiring. He also told us that Felix Fabrizio was a tabulator for a radio quiz program called "Stop and Collect."

We mentioned nightclubbing and the hacky suggested we go to Hernando's Hideaway. A hostess, who was rather plump, greeted us at the door—it was Mitzi Hoffer. She told us that a famous trio known as the "Ricochets" were entertaining there. We heard the wonderful music and as we went to our table we could see the trio was composed of Betty Faye Allen, Barbara Billet and Tony Kovach. At intermission they came over to see us and told us their next engagement was at the Waldorf-Astoria. We were quite hungry, too, so we called the head waiter, Jack Newsome, over. He told us that on the side he was an attorney for Tampa U's wayward boys.

A few stags came in, causing quite a scene and who do you think they were? The same old ones—Jack Munz, Mark Ryan and Ward Cooper. The bouncer, Jack Goodman, had to come over and ask them to leave. With a little piece of resistance they left. The highlight of the evening was the special guest appearance of that new romantic crooner who had all the teenagers swooning. To our surprise, he was our old friend, Tom Wolfe. Tom told us Raymond Tavares is playing the leading role of Rudolph Valentino in the "Sheik." We got up to leave and ran into Robert Spencer coming in the door. He said due to the fact he was outstanding in tumbling in college, he is now a demonstrator for twisting pretzels. The door was opened for us by a handsome young man we recognized as Selburne Yates. He told us he just got out of the hospital because one night he opened the car door for Marie Buchholz and her chauffeur ran over his toe. He had to have a private nurse day and night, and engaged Mary Noto. We walked down the street towards our hotel and heard a voice calling us from a dark doorway. We got close and when we saw his face, it was Jerry Scaglione wanting us to buy bolita tickets because he needed the money to work on his master's degree this summer. He told us Robert Schlitt is capitalizing on a well-established business—and conducts experiments on the guinea pigs who taste the beer.

We then went back to the hotel and got on the elevator and Michael Slavin took us up to the fourth floor. She told us she teaches school during the day and has to work at night also to keep her husband, Mr. Crocker, in beer money.

We hit the sack for the evening and got up the next morning bright and early and headed for the beach. The first person we saw was Henry Shell, principal owner of a Tarpon Springs Sponge Fleet. He told us one of his employees, George Klimis, is teaching the little Greeks how to be spongers. We went down by the water and put our blankets next to some other beach admirers—Evelyn Redden, Agnes Dale and Josephine Jones. They told us they are now on the administrative staff at Tadpole Elementary School. We saw a sign that read "Trice's Fishing Camp," and decided to go in and buy some bait. Mrs. Margaret Trice waited on us and said she also conducts fishing trips in the Gulf for Kennedy's Boat Lines. She told us Harry Kennedy is very busy teaching new tricks to old dogs down at the City Pound.

After fishing for about forty minutes, we got restless and decided to go to the drug store for something cool to drink. We picked up the Tampa Morning Tribune and saw Bob Hancock's picture on the front page. The cut-line read: New Publisher of the Tampa Morning Tribune and General Manager of Radio Station WFLA. Well, we were glad to see Bob doing so well because we always thought he'd be a newsboy selling the latest edition of the Minaret. We walked over to the fountain and to our amazement, Jayne Anderson was mixing some concoction. She said she was experimenting on a new punch to knock Rocky Marciano out. Jayne informed Pat Williamson Sabin is baking bread on TV and every now and then Hopalong Cassidy rides right through her batter.

We left the drug store and started back for Tampa U. so we could see some of the old faculty members at 12:30. When we started up the steps by the freight entrance, we saw a sign that read: Mr. and Mrs. Whitis, Incorporated. We learned from one of the students that Ruth Whitis is now interior decorator for the University. We walked in the lobby and saw Chuck Koch, who said he plans to graduate in June. He told us an old classmate of his, Ciro Zambito, is building houses along Gandy Bridge. Ruben Ares spotted us and came over to chat for a minute. He told us he's working in England as a financial expert helping Mr. Churchhill and came back to T. U. to take a refresher course. We left dear old T. U. and started over the bridge when we noticed Shirley Ruleman walking toward us. She said she is now teaching at Jesuit and has the little Gunn boys in her homeroom. Of course, we remembered Frances Lumsden Gunn. Speaking of teaching, Shirley mentioned Benjamin Fielding teaches Sunday School out in Lutz, Florida.

We started out once more and as we passed the Jockey Club we saw Thomas Doyle standing out front. He told us he's a bankruptcy investigator for the Federal Trade Commission and that Kenneth Christensen keeps his books for him. We left Tom and started to turn the corner when we saw Justo Rodriguez at the magazine stand. He runs the stand and likes it very much because he gets all the news! Also that his old friend, David Romero, runs the pool hall across the street.

We happened to notice Eula Gonzalez passing by and we caught her eye. She came over and gave us a little more news. She told us that Chloe Snow was keeping up with Joneses — each have five children now—Loryce Sivertson is playing the piano for Spike Jones, Joe Bodo is trying to find out what makes brown spots on bananas, Harold Belford is trying to devise a new method to beat the income tax, Elizabeth Schwartz is a famous commercial artist known for painting the town, Robert Motezuma is the amateur player in Bradenton, heading a safari in Africa, June Duncan is principal at Sopcopy Elementary School, Justine McCurdy is writing her thesis on the similarity of bugs and people, Marilyn Peters is teaching English grammar to Spanish speaking students, Alberta Roberts is personnel director for Kress, and Leona Spencer is head of a girls' reformatory.

Seems as if we have missed several of our classmates along the way, though we can't recall their names. It has been rumored that two of them are engaged in espionage work in Southern Siberia and another is the owner of an ice cube manufacturing plant in Iceland. Tears welled in our eyes and pain tugged at our hearts as we saw and chatted with all our successful friends.

The class of '54 may not go down in the annals of history as the most prosperous group of graduates but it is doubtful if one will ever be more diversified.

CLASS HISTORY — 1954

In the Fall of 1950, we, the Graduating Class of 1954, found ourselves in the strange surroundings of Plant Park.

Apparently the expressions on our faces were those of the innocent and unsuspecting Freshmen because those not on campus for the first time greeted us with smirks, insinuations, threats and promises. These upperclassmen, as they called themselves, caused us no end of aches, pains and embarrassments. Constantly we were hounded to do their bidding.

Perhaps as we were cooling ourselves in the fish pond after a hearty paddling, it was then we vowed we, as Sophomores, would do away with Rat Week. One question remained uppermost in our minds during the initiation—Why did the Administration of such a great University allow such sweet, tender, eager Freshmen to be so chastised by the hoodlums in complete control of the situation?

Still a bit dazed from Rat Week, we were again thrown into a mental turmoil with words such as probation, accreditation, endowment fund, and Southern Association.

They had no meaning for us—but to the upperclassmen they meant a great deal—how well we can remember in the Fall of 1950 when it was announced that the University of Tampa had been placed on a probationary accreditation status with the Southern Association of American Colleges and Universities. We as Freshmen were pleased, of course, that the University had taken another step forward — although we didn't realize how great a stride it was at that time.

Today, as the graduating members of the last class to enter the University of Tampa when it was not accredited by the Southern Association, we fully comprehend how important to us it has and will be.

Another great roar was heard as something called "Homecoming" was approaching. It was then, during this weekend of reunions, barbecues, parades, dances and the big football game between Delta State and T.U., that we learned the real meaning of Alma Mater. But can you imagine our indignation when we learned that we, the Freshmen, must begin these festivities by donning our P.J.'s and marching through the center of town?

The brightest moment for us was the crowning of the Homecoming Queen, Gloria Gonzalez, who was a Freshman. It was this year that Frank Sinkwich, great all-American athlete for the University of Georgia, was appointed head football coach. Sinkwich had as assistant line coach a little, rotund fellow, Marcelino Huerta.

After such a wild and furious start we settled down in the second semester to the routine of college life and began studying and using books in the library. Ah, this was the year we were waiting for—now we would get our revenge. We broke our Freshman vow about doing away with Rat Court as we continually intimidated the little rascals.

Now it was our turn to know our way around this Moorish edifice and give the new arrivals fits.

Three Students Receive Checks, Nine Awarded Keys In Assembly

Dr. Rhodes Announced Essay Contest Winners Recognition Given To Minaret Staff

Three University of Tampa students who submitted prize-winning essays in the contest sponsored this year by Mr. Currie B. Witt of the Safety Transportation Corp., Tampa, were presented with checks at the May 25 assembly.

Dean M. C. Rhodes made presentations as follows: Bernard M. Grey, $150; Ralph C. Curtis, $100; Dean Goldsmith, $50.

The essays were on the subject, "The inefficiency of government management of business enterprises creates a heavier charge against the living standards of all the people than do the profits, after taxes, of private enterprise under the incentive system."

Dean Rhodes expressed appreciation of the generosity of Mr. Witt, whose sponsoring of the contest, he said, made it possible for University students to learn more about the economic forces governing the American system of free enterprise and therefore to become better prepared for the responsibilities of citizenship.

Music Department Gives Recitals, Concerts in May

This week recitals have been taking the foreground in the music news on the University of Tampa campus. On Monday, May 24, there was a recital of the beginning, intermediate, and advanced piano students of Prof. Stephen Park held in the Dome Theater. On Tuesday, May 25, a senior voice and piano recital was held by Martha Benz and Barbara Billett at 8:30 in the Dome Theater. A junior recital for Jim Johnson, tenor and a senior recital for Tony Kovach, piano was held on Wednesday, May 26.

June Hullinger, a pupil of Prof. Lyman Wiltse, won the vocal division of the Young Artists auditions. She will sing with the Tampa Philharmonic next year. Miss Hullinger has been singing lead in the production of "Brigadoon" presented by the Manatee Players in Bradenton.

The University of Tampa Band played at MacDill Air Force Base on Armed Forces Day and on May 20 played at the Tampa Terrace Hotel before the Tampa Chamber of Commerce luncheon honoring World Trade Week. The Spartan Band remained as guests for the luncheon.

Students seemed to enjoy "Caribbean Fantasy" and "Phantom Regiment," played by the band in the May 25 assembly. During the assembly Prof. Lyman Wiltse, head of the Music Department, gave a short talk on the courses offered in the music department including the band, chorus and the Music Appreciation Course.

Martha Benz, soprano, will be soloist at the Class Day Ceremony held Friday, June 4. The Spartan band will play for the Baccalaureate Commencement Friday, June 4. Commencement on Friday, June 4.

Music courses will be offered during the Summer Session and students interested may check the University for the time and day.

Nine students on the present staff of the Minaret and one former member were presented keys in recognition of their devotion and loyalty to the newspaper and service to the University.

Dr. Howard G. Baker, Head of the English Department announced the awards Tuesday in assembly. He is the faculty advisor for the Minaret.

Those receiving keys were Bob Hancock, last year's editor and the present editor; Alice Farmer, associate editor last year, editor first semester this year; Dawn Palmer, feature editor last year, managing editor this year; Doris Duryea, staff writer last year, feature editor this year; Joyce Newell, staff writer last year, news editor this year; Hank DiStefano, sports editor; Charlie Archibald, staff writer; Bernard Shufelt, staff writer, and Mary Lou Roos, exchange editor.

During the course of this year we were much grieved by the death of one of our professors, Dr. C. C. Denny.

The big highlight of our second year is without a doubt—Full Accreditation. At last, we had reached a goal—long aspired since way back in '31, and this time we were proudly aware of its great significance.

On the football field our Spartans wound up their last season under Ironjawed Sinkwich. Margaret Truman visited our campus on one of her many tours around the country.

Thus, quite normally, we closed our second year.

September, 1952, we came back to find the usual routine awaiting. Homecoming came and we met in Plant Park for the annual Fish Fry.

We were accustomed to taking a few classes off now and then, especially now, and substitute coffee in the Snack Bar. At these times, we could laugh at those poor Sophomores who were struggling through Mr. Keene's Political Science class.

We were indeed sad when we heard of the passing of our beloved history professor — Dr. Herbert Luab. Tear-streaked eyes and saddened hearts were in evidence in all parts of the campus.

Without much further ado our third year passed and we were at last ready to wear the coveted title of Senior. To many of us it was a one year title, but to others of us, it stuck with us for many semesters.

This year we have witnessed many improvements in our school—we are really advancing.

We can look back over our four or more years — it seems rather short now — but once it seemed insurmountable. We may not have been the most outstanding class to be graduated from the University, but we have no guilty feeling as we reach for the sheepskin.

VALEDICTORIAN SAYS

pate for a young bride like yourself to be humming on her wedding day?" There was a brief pause, and you could just see this young lady thinking. Suddenly her face lit up like an incandescent bulb, she clapped her hands and danced up and down on her toes as she excitedly exclaimed, "I know! I know! I know it now! Stranger in Paradise!"

Well, folks, I too am a stranger in my role here today, but I'd hardly call this a paradise. Now don't get the idea that I'm against speeches and such, 'cause I'm not. It's only when I'm the suck—the person who has to make the talk that I'm not for it. But, Doctor Baker says that if I want my diploma I've gotta make the speech, and if I've gotta then I've gotta. I still feel that Felix and I've got it all over you others here today, though. We must do the talking, but you (if you want your diplomas) must sit here and listen. So — nobody gains.

This week marks the end for most of us of a long hard college career. Some may go on to get higher degrees, but most of us will be going out to accept the challenge and to set the world on fire. I'd like to give out just a little bit of advice though — be careful that you don't get your matches wet. There's going to be a lot of wet and stormy weather between now and the time most of us are able to kindle any sort of a flame, let alone create a conflagration noticeable to the world. There are plenty of places right here in Florida and the rest of the South where fires should be started, and there should be no lacking of opportunities for those of you who have the desire and the ability to get them going. I and my generation (and I do belong to a generation or two before most of you) have gotten things pretty much into a mess, both locally and on the national and international levels. It's up to you younger folks to try to straighten things out and get the old world out of the mess we've left her in.

Several years ago I was talking to the late Dr. Denny who at that time was head of the psychology department here at Tampa. We were in the lobby and one of the squirrels out of the park ventured in one door of the lobby and then rippled across and went out the door on the other side. We watched him, and as he left I mentioned to Dr. Denny that there was one squirrel who could go back to the trees and tell his friends that he'd been through college. The old man thought for a moment, then said, "Yes, and I don't doubt but that he got as much out of it as some of the students do who stay here four years." Now, we know that everyone won't derive the maximum benefit from an exposure to education—there are some who have natural immunity to learning, and others have taken precautions to insure against intellectual infection. But it is presumed that those of us who have come all the way and who are now being graduated will have absorbed at least a fair portion of the knowledge and training to which we've been exposed. Those who have, and who will take the pains to apply this learning and these skills to their jobs after they leave here, will prosper in their chosen fields. But there will be some (there always are) who will be able to say only "I've been through college." Well—itty them, friends, for they're no better off than Dr. Denny's squirrel—he went through college.

PERSISTENCE YIELDS LITTLE-KNOWN STORY OF ALLIGATOR, BEAR IN PARK

by LESLIE ROSS

Several months ago, when I first came to the University, I was walking in the park while awaiting my next class. I was very busy watching the squirrels and pigeons when I saw two wire-enclosed cages. Upon closer scrutiny I discovered a bear in one and an alligator in the other. At first I thought the alligator was a stuffed alligator. Finally, I noticed an eye gleaming at me. Then the reptile moved; it was alive.

One of the park attendants came along as I was watching the bear, and I asked where it had come from and the name. The attendant laughed and said several people had asked the same question. He said he did not know the source of either the bear or the gator. In fact, after I asked several people, I discovered that no one seemed to know the origin of either. All I could discover was that there were an alligator and a bear at the park. I had already made that astounding discovery for myself. I was so curious about the two that I started to make inquiries about them. First I went to the Public Library. It had no information. One person at the library said that the alligator and the bear were not there. He said they had died. I called the local papers, the Tribune and the Times. The animals had been here as long as they could recall. No one seemed to know from where they had appeared.

Suddenly it dawned on me! My best source of information was the Park Superintendent. I asked various people who the superintendent was and I discovered that there are many people in Tampa who do not know this. I am happy to say that the number is few in comparison with a lot of cities. I finally called Mr. Sanborn, the Park Superintendent. He told me that the gator and the bear had been there some years and he was happy to give me any information I needed.

Doubtless, I should explain the process that was needed to get this far. My wife works for the Boy Scout office in Tampa and has several friends there who have lived here all their lives. The girls were very helpful in calling the various people they knew who might have any information concerning the bear and the gator. I probably caused their telephone bill to go up a few cents. They were of great help and I wish to thank them each for their help.

Mr. Sanborn told me that the bear was given to the park by a Mr. Bray, who could be located at the local Seven-Up Bottling Company. He told me that the bear was a Canadian black bear, and it was a female. He advised calling Mr. Bray. Mr. Sanborn gave me the only available information on the gator that I could find. When he took over his present position there were five alligators in the park. The present gator is the sole survivor of the original five. I could not find out the origin of the five. The names and sexes were also unknown. Mr. Marco Penn was the former superintendent, but I could not reach him. I thought perhaps he would know.

I called Mr. C. B. Bray at the Seven-Up Company and asked him about the bear. He was delighted to give me the information he remembered. The bear was purchased in St. Petersburg in 1942 from an Animal Farm on Fourth Street. It was the runt of a group of trained cubs. Mr. Bray tells me that he bought the bear for his wife for a Christmas present. I imagine she was surprised. He picked up the cub in a Crosley station wagon and proceeded on his way to Tampa. On the way the bear rose up and rather frightened Mr. Bray. The only available means of quieting the bear was by feeding it. So Mr. Bray stopped at a stand and bought some lettuce and assorted fruit to quiet her. He owned the bear for about a year. Mrs. Bray lost her liking for the bear when she had been bitten by her twice. I can imagine she would. The bear was very friendly to Mr. Bray. One day the bear was fed until it was supposed to be full. Mr. Bray tells me that it seemed to have an insatiable appetite. The bear ate until it ate up all that was available to feed it. Its sides bulged, but it was still eating when a halt was called. Finally, in 1943 the bear was given to the park. When it arrived at the park it was named Paddy, and it is still called by that name. The name Mr. Bray knew her by has been forgotten, but his experience with Paddy has not. He tells me that he has not seen Paddy since he gave her to the park, and I think it is probably due to a little sentimental feeling, although he would probably deny this.

The park department has custody of Paddy, but she and the gator are fed pretty well by children and other frequenters of the grounds. Paddy is getting old now for a bear and is a little on the grouchy side, so children, please be careful with your hands. Caution is required of all children, one to 100. However, for all the enjoyment from watching the bear, you can thank Mr. Bray.

Coach Bailey also has a few boys who live in cities outside of Tampa, but who are still in high school participating with the regular boys.

STILL LACK FOOTBALL ASSISTANT

The University of Tampa is still searching for an assistant coach for the football team.
