S.G.A. guidelines to be established

By D. J. ROBERTS
Community News Editor

Shortly after Student Government officers decided against showing the X-rated movie Emmanuel during parents' weekend, they received a memo from UT provost Edwin Wilde announcing plans to form a committee to set up guidelines for extra-curricular activities.

And although the proposed showing of Emmanuel may be unrelated to the decision to form the committee, the showing of X-rated movies is the type of issue the committee will be examining.

The purpose of the committee will be to keep all extra-curricular activities in line with the mission statement of the university. The mission statement says, in part, "Inspired by belief in God, respect for human dignity, and love of freedom . . . The Board of Trustees hereby establish the mission of the University of Tampa to . . . develop a personal integration of intellectual, moral and practical knowledge which will assist them (students) in becoming productive, responsible, self-reliant and free persons. . ."

Wilde said that he had two especially important jobs to do this year. One was to implement the bimester, and the other was to organize the committee to set up guidelines for student activities.

"The highest priority of the institution (UT) is to get things working in accordance to the mission statement. We want to be sure our extra-curricular activities are appropriate for this university," Wilde said. "We are not establishing a moral code. This committee will simply decide the process by which decisions can be made about moral questions."

Ralph Gonzalez, student body president, is not upset by the plans for the committee, although he has some reservations.

"When I first read the memo, I hit the ceiling. I was really upset. But when I talked to Wilde I didn't feel threatened anymore. If this goes the way it's supposed to, that's fine. I feel we could come up with a rational policy. It's just going to be a philosophy and when that is established, every decision we (SGA) make will have to be in line with that philosophy."

The committee, which will consist of three faculty members and three students, will meet as many times as necessary to write up a policy. Once the policy is written, the committee will disband and never meet again, according to Wilde.

The policy of the committee will be for the use of Student Government officers when a controversial decision has to be made.

"It should turn out to be a tool to be used on our side. It will help us make important decisions about controversial issues," Gonzalez said.

According to Wilde, the guidelines will work this way: If members of student government wish to ask a controversial speaker to give a speech on campus, and they aren't sure whether it's a good idea, they will follow the guidelines. The guidelines should help them make rational decisions, but the guidelines won't bar specific events such as X-rated movies. Student Government will still make the final decision.

"We are trying to build a reasonable set of guidelines," Wilde said. "These flaming issues need to be answered reasonably. The guidelines will say: here's what's important, here's how we make decisions. We want these flaming issues handled in a consistent manner. We're trying to move away from crisis situations. We shouldn't be doing things contrary to what our mission statement says. The question of whether we should show an X-rated movie should be answered."

Although Gonzalez supports the idea of the committee, he fears that it might eventually turn into a bigger issue.

"I agree with Dr. Wilde's perception that it is impossible to try to reach a logical course of action in the midst of flaming issues," Gonzalez said. "But if the administration ever starts to set stringent guidelines, cans and cannots for activities and events, it would change the character of the university. I think it (UT) would become more of a Jerry Falwell college."

Gonzalez added that if the committee fulfills Wilde's promise and only sets up general guidelines to help student government officers make important decisions, he won't protest.

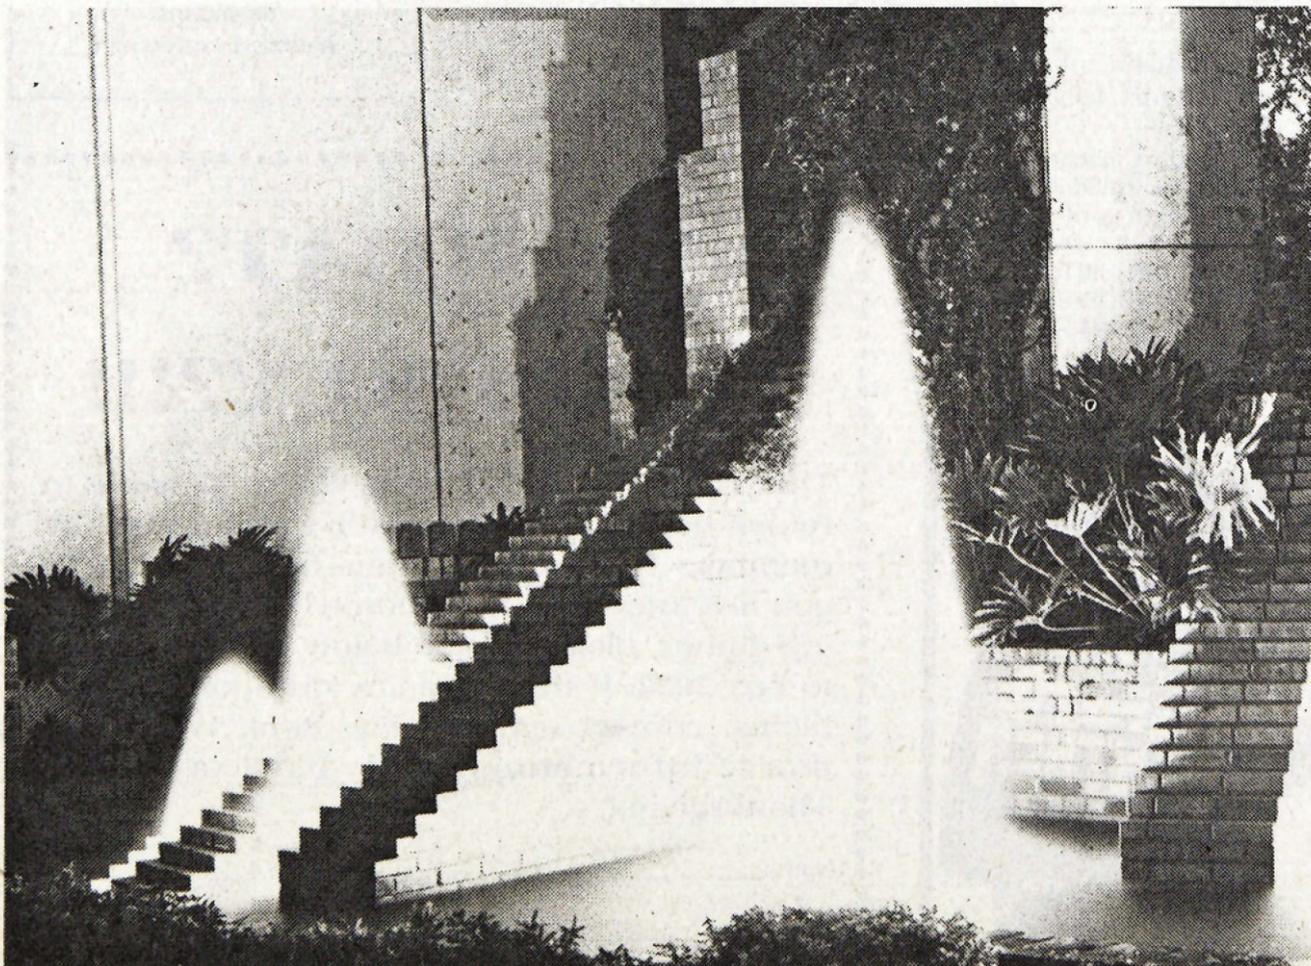

"It would legitimize our role as adults for making decisions," he said. "But if it turns into a monster and they try to make decisions for us, I would definitely protest. I will defend what I think is in the best interest of the student body."

Wilde said that he doubted the guidelines would ever become a "monster." "It's not a continuing committee. They will only meet to set up the policy, then they will never meet again. Theoretically, I guess, that could happen—but practically it will never happen."

The committee has not been formed yet. But committee members have been discussed. Gonzalez said he was pleased with the choices Wilde made for the three faculty members.

"I know the faculty members and they are all unbiased people," Gonzalez said.

Gonzalez will choose the students to serve on the committee.

"Catch it!"

Tom and Jerry stand tall and proud on local billboards, inviting viewers to tune in to Channel 28 WFTS-TV, the Tampa Bay area's newest television station.

Broadcasting is scheduled to begin around Nov. 15. Billing itself as "Your Family Television Station," Channel 28 will offer a full schedule of programming from 6 a.m. Monday through Saturday (7 a.m. Sunday) to past 1 a.m. each night.

"Our backbone is programs that were popular in the '50s and '60s," said Ian "Sandy" Wheeler, president and general manager of WFTS-TV. "We call these shows evergreens - they never die."

Some of these "evergreens" include I Love Lucy, The Andy Griffith Show, The Beverly Hillbillies, The Dick Van Dyke Show, and The Twilight Zone.

On Saturdays, viewers can catch See STATION, page 8

SAE News

This week SAE is holding its annual "Gone With The Wind" party. There will be a sound system with Dan Kowal as the d.j.

In intramurals, SAE lost to the Keggers, 21-7, in volleyball. In floor hockey SAE beat Alpha Epsilon Pi 6-4 and tied the Keggers 5-5.

Pi Kappa Phi News

The Pi Kapp hockey team is 2-0 after the first week, with big showdowns on Thursday at 3 p.m. The volleyball team is 1-3 with a game on Wednesday at 7 p.m.

The Pi Kapp little sisters won with a score of 4-0 over Alpha Epsilon Pi little sisters.

The Pi Kappa Phi PUSH project is being held this weekend. All those who would like to donate their time are welcome, and should see Rob Doak for information.

Religious Life Council

Students, faculty and staff members are invited to attend Interfaith Services. The schedule for this month is as follows: Nov. 19, 5:15 to 5:45 in the river room of the cafeteria. The theme of the service is "World Hunger" — corresponding to Oxfam. It is third in a series. Nov. 24, 12:05 to 12:30 in the Ballroom. This service will concentrate on Thanksgiving.

Alpha Chi Omega News

The sisters of Alpha Chi Omega would like to welcome Janet Golden, a national field representative, to UT. Throughout the week, Janet will be meeting with all members of the sorority, as well as university faculty and administrators. She will be able to offer some helpful hints that will prepare AXO for the national initiation, which will take place early in January.

Congratulations are also in order to Darcy Langnes, the carnation girl of the month for October. Darcy's talents have been used numerous times for decorating rooms during rush, making nametags, and making the Founders Day ribbons that all the sisters wore.

Faculty Forums

The Faculty Committee will be sponsoring faculty forums during the year to allow faculty members to share information about their research, travel, teaching methods, or other matters of academic value with the university community.

The first of these forums will be held on Thursday, Nov. 12, at 4 p.m., in Room 210 of Plant Hall.

Dr. Terry Snell, Assistant Professor of Biology, will be discussing his summer travel to Israel and the scientific research (in laymen's terms) that led him there, as well as showing slides from his trip.

Everyone in the university community is welcome to attend.

Pershing Rifles would like to express their sympathy for Mark Sotak and his family and hope he will have a speedy recovery.

The PR pledge class is visiting handicapped children at the MacDonald Training Center. They are to be congratulated for a super service project.

Delta Gamma News

The Delta Gammas just came back from a Daytona Get-Away weekend. Beside camping and a little beach action, the chapter had an Alcohol Awareness workshop, exercises in group dynamics, and pledge education skits. The Delta Gamma pledges have begun taking sign-ups for their Tuck-in Service. This service includes tuck-ins by Delta Gamma pledges, a bedtime story, and a teddy bear to hold. The price of the tuck-in is $1.50. Sign-ups are in the cafeteria every day at lunch and dinner.

Pre-registration

By pre-enrolling on Nov. 23-24 and pre-registering by paying your Spring charges by Dec. 11, this will allow you to enjoy extra days during your Christmas vacation as you will not have to go through the regular registration procedures. You may go directly to your classes on Jan. 7.

Students not pre-enrolling and pre-registering must go through the registration procedure on Jan. 5 or 6.

An estimated pre-billing statement will be sent out in early November giving you the charges and credits known to the Business Office. Instructions will be included with these pre-billing statements.

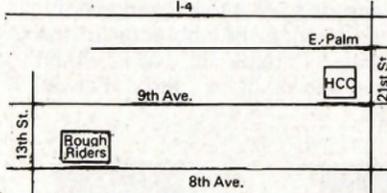

If you have any questions regarding your Spring financial aid as it appears on your estimated pre-billing statement, stop by the Financial Aid Office, Room 439, Plant Hall.

Theta Chi News

The brothers of Theta Chi look forward to the upcoming honors ceremony on Nov. 20. Congratulations to brother Rick Cloney on his acceptance to MENSA and to Paul Horean for his acceptance to Yale's MBA program.

Opening a can of worms

By AMY HILL
Editor

What is moral, and what is immoral?

Traditionally in this country, it has been the right of the individual to decide. But it's becoming more and more likely that students at the University of Tampa may someday have that question answered for them.

This year the administration plans to form a committee, comprised of three faculty members and three students, which would set up guidelines to determine whether or not an event sponsored by the Student Government Association would be appropriate for the university.

These guidelines would help the S.G.A. to decide if, for example, they should show an X-rated film on campus.

There is nothing fundamentally wrong with devising such a procedure or in forming a committee to discuss controversial issues which might arise.

But although the committee would not set up an actual code of ethics to be followed religiously, several questions should be raised about the initial purpose behind this first step toward regulation.

Here's the problem: There is no doubt that the intention of the administration is to direct the S.G.A. toward complying with the university's conservative Mission Statement.

In effect, this means that the goal of the administration is simply to gain more control. In knowing that, the formation of such a committee might appear to be little more than a token effort to please the students.

Secondly, a committee made up of three faculty members and three students sounds equitable. However, who should decide which faculty members would serve? It would be very easy to slant the committee simply by the selection of the committee members. In addition, how could any student or faculty member be found who didn't have some conflict of interest or feel some political pressure?

Suppose, for example, the S.G.A. sponsored a band which planned to perform a song with vulgar lyrics.

Like the Trask-Bush Amendment — the new state law which cuts funding to universities that allow organizations to recommend or advocate sex between unmarried persons — the possibility of this kind of intervention could open a Pandora's box of complications.

The students who have been elected as S.G.A. officers by the majority of their peers should be trusted to make choices which reflect the opinions of the students they represent. Any interference by the administration would be making a farce of their positions, responsibilities, and commitment to the students. The administration claims that these guidelines are intended only to help S.G.A. officers make decisions about controversial issues. If the S.G.A. chose to ignore the guidelines, would the administration then be able to uphold their decision?

What it all boils down to is this: Whose college is it anyway? At times it seems as if the administration is thinking only in terms of conforming to a conservative Mission Statement to please some Moral Majority-type trustees.

Advice column

Minnie Rhett

Dear Minnie Rhett:

I am dating three girls at the same time. I like all of them for different reasons. One is smart, one is pretty, and one is built like a model. They all think they're the only ones I'm dating—don't ask me how I managed that. But its starting to catch up with me. I accidentally made dates with two of them for the Devo concert. Now I'm stuck. Please help me!

signed: real idiot

Dear Idiot:

I'll tell you something: When I was only two reels old, I once had an affair with three calculators, all at the same time, but that came to an end when my number came up ... so to speak.

Your best bet would be to confess to each girl that you're a three-timer. It won't be a party, that's for sure, but you've gotten a little over your head in the romance department, buster.

There is another way, though. What you should do is think of a good excuse (your half-brother just arrived in town, your cat died, something suddenly came up) and tell that excuse to both girls. Then call up the third girl (I would imagine she's the smart one, since most guys would only take pretty faces and nice bodies to a Devo concert) and offer to take her.

If she's really smart, she'll turn you down. Then maybe you'll realize that being Casanova isn't always gobs of fun.

(Until the gremlins climb down from the minarets to make Dear Minnie Rhett another box, please send all letters to Dear Minnie Rhett, UT, P.O. Box #451).

Letter to the Editor:

In past decades at the university, there were many championships captured by a big and boisterous organization better known as the Spartan football players. These were times when 6'5", 280 lbs. could be translated into a full scholarship and a guaranteed G.P.A. to graduate the beholder.

Much has changed here since then. There is no more football team, and the scandalous behavior which graduated many without just cause has ceased, not just at UT, but at many of the other colleges because of the NCAA adoption. But although many of the athletes of yesterday benefitted, perhaps too greatly, from their talents, it seems as though the pendulum has swung too far to the right at UT.

The average athlete spends at least four hours a day at his or her sport between practice and related activities such as running and lifting weights. But many athletes feel they are perhaps even being penalized for their participation in sports. A good example is when a team has an event which is away and requires missing some class time because of travelling or game times. Some teachers are not willing to understand this and missing two or three classes for an athlete can mean getting a "C" instead of a "B", and so on because of circumstances beyond the athlete's control.

Many instances like this one have occurred at UT and as a whole the athletes at this university find it unjust and inconsiderate of those teachers who find it difficult to accept or understand why someone should miss a class to represent the university in sports.

The Varsity Athletic Association expresses this view on behalf of its member varsity athletes who represent their teams and viewpoints. Hopefully in the future we might place a bit more value on the athletes here. The Spartans play hard to keep the UT Spirit going. Your support is important to our vitality.

Wash. schools feel cuts

SEATTLE, WA (CPS) — Washington State and the University of Washington, along with other state colleges, won a reprieve of sorts when the state Supreme Court denied primary and secondary schools the chance to escape Gov. John Spellman's budget-cutting ax.

Both universities have already declared fiscal emergencies, which means they can fire tenured faculty if necessary.

In September, Spellman abruptly announced an immediate ten percent state budget cut. For the University of Washington, the budget cut translated into a plan to save $33 million by firing 260 faculty members and 420 staffers, and by gradually dropping 4000 students from the rolls.

The state Supreme Court denied the primary and secondary schools' petition to avoid the cuts, although it left open the possibility of further action in lower courts. Lawyers for the schools said that the court's denial means "the dismantling of the state's school system."

On the same day, Gerberding hinted that some legislators are willing to appropriate relief funds for all levels of education. The legislature reconvenes in early November.

Spellman's cuts were an attempt to balance a state budget depleted by severe economic conditions in the lumber industry.

UT Forum selects speakers

By DUNCAN WHITE
Campus News Editor

What would you say to a man who was the first "University Professor" at George Washington University, a professor at Columbia University for 20 years, a senior advisor to the White House, and the author of 12 books? You'll get your chance on Thursday, Nov. 19, when Dr. Amitai Etzioni visits the University of Tampa.

Etzioni's visit is part of an undertaking by the University Forum Committee. The members of this committee are appointed by the Provost and their job is to arrange for authorities from different areas to visit UT.

According to Dr. Michael Mendelsohn, Professor of English and a member of the University Forum Committee, "Dr. Etzioni is an internationally known authority on a number of topics. He is a provocative writer and we understand that he is a dynamic speaker. We are eagerly looking forward to his appearances on campus."

Many of Etzioni's accomplishments have occurred in the social sciences and on Nov. 19, he'll be making three presentations. From 10 to 11 a.m. Etzioni will address students on "Sociology: Agent of Social Change," and at 11 a.m. to noon on "Reindustrialization: Can America Compete?" Both sessions for students will be held in the Ballroom and followed by question and answer periods.

At 3 p.m., Etzioni will speak to UT faculty and invited community members on the topic, "Freedom and Dignity in Society: Public vs. Individual Responsibility." That session with Etzioni will be held in the Continuing Education seminar room and will also be followed by a question and answer exchange.

Food Fight?

By DUNCAN WHITE
Campus News Editor

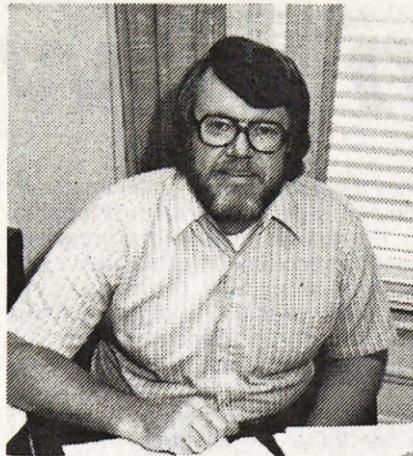

If you've ever had a gripe against the food served in the cafeteria, don't overlook joining the recently formed food committee to try to change the situation.

Under the direction of Freshman Senator Carla Griffith, significant changes were announced at the committee's Nov. 3 meeting.

Griffith reported to the committee that through negotiations with Curt Burgdorf, cafeteria manager, fresh vegetables had been introduced to the salad bar, the temperature of the food had been considerably increased, and more attention would be paid to contact with the food by cafeteria workers with long hair.

Griffith announced that Morrisons had lost over $6,000 in utensils, glasses, and silverware so far this year. Griffith also announced that students might have the chance to contribute their suggestions when the food service contract is drawn up early next year.

The food committee offers an insight into how Morrisons runs the University of Tampa kitchen and meets every Tuesday at 9 p.m. in the student government office.

More time to teach

Three division chairmen resign

By STEPHANIE TRIPP
Assistant Editor

The recent resignation of Dr. Joe Decker as chairman of the Division of Social Sciences marks the third such action by division chairmen this semester.

Decker's resignation was preceded by those of Dr. Wayne Smith, chairman of the Division of Science and Mathematics and Mr. Everett Richards, chairman of the Division of Business and Economics and graduate studies in business.

Decker, a Professor of History at the University of Tampa for 11 years, will be leaving his position as chairman for the second time at the end of the spring semester. He held the job from 1974-77 and resumed it in 1979. During the 1979-80 school year, he chaired the Division of Education in addition to his duties with the Division of Social Sciences.

"By the end of three years, I'm ready to go back to full-time teaching," Decker said. "The job is supposed to be half teaching and half administration, but the administration takes up more than half the time."

Decker's replacement has not yet been announced.

Smith, chairman of his division for 4 1/2 years, was the first to resign. The Professor of Biology has taught at UT for 10 years and has also served as assistant dean.

Smith said his reason for resigning was that he had been removed from his students for too long he wanted to return to full-time teaching.

"A division chairman has to carry half a load anyway but divisional responsibilities are more than half your time — more like 80 percent," he said.

Dr. George Jackson has been named to replace Smith, who will finish out the school year. Jackson has been a Professor of Chemistry at the university for eight years.

Richards, an Assistant Professor of Business, has been teaching at UT for six years and has served as chairman of his division for 18 months.

"As a result of a coronary I had in January the pace is a little bit rough for me," Richards said. "Secondary reason — I said I would be chairman for only a limited amount of time. Administration is not my primary interest — teaching is."

Richards said that he will finish the fall semester as division chairman.

No replacement for Richards has been announced to date.

All three professors plan to continue teaching at UT.

Cheshire speaks at A. X. induction

By STEPHANIE TRIPP
Assistant Editor

"As Demosthenes said many years ago to the Athenians, 'In God's name, I beg of you to think,'" Dr. Richard Cheshire, president of the University of Tampa said in his speech at the Alpha Chi induction ceremony Nov. 6 in Fletcher Lounge.

Cheshire, Provost Edwin Wilde, and Dean of Students Carl Hite were guests at the ceremony, where over 30 members were inducted.

"In our world of higher learning," Cheshire continued, "that is what we must do in order to achieve the order of our souls and the order of our commonwealth which we all seek."

Concluding his speech, the president said, "I congratulate you again and I remind you the trust you hold to the similar, really magnetic sense of trust that we, the faculty and the officers of this institution hold for you."

Following Cheshire's speech was the announcement of the honor society's new officers: Frank Corden, president; Jeanie Locicero, vice president; Dorinda Noya, secretary; and Krista Miller, treasurer.

The organization is sponsored by Dr. Marlon Ellison. Co-sponsors are Kathy Trott and Dr. Thomas Tyson.

Father Bob: A sense of purpose

By OLIVE THOMPSON
Minaret Staff Writer

Father Bob Wiesenbaugh believes his life is a pilgrimage. This pilgrimage has led UT's chaplain of four years to many different places and positions, serving, studying, teaching, and striving to develop himself spiritually and to help his fellow man.

Wiesenbaugh serves as chaplain at UT and is involved in the Newman Club and the Religious Life Council. He appears to have a genuine selfless concern for others and says his job is "not just to be chaplain for the Catholic students, but to serve anybody that would like my help."

A Catholic priest normally must have a minimum of seven years of education beyond high school, earning degrees in philosophy and theology. Wiesenbaugh's formal education is much more extensive than this. He has a master's degree in medical physiology from Georgetown medical school, a bachelor's in biology, and a master's in theology.

He studied in Canada for a doctorate in theology which he could not complete. He also had two years of classical education in Latin and Greek and two years of philosophy at St. Louis University.

At one time Wiesenbaugh taught high school in Philadelphia, Pa., where he is originally from. He now feels it is his calling to work on college campuses. Before coming to UT, Wiesenbaugh served as chaplain at Mankato State University in Minnesota. He has not worked full time in a church.

"I thought I could do the most good in colleges. That's where I feel I belong," he said. About his work in churches he says, "I go and help out once in a while. Only one summer have I worked full time."

The Newman Club, "The Catholic Community at UT," was started by Wiesenbaugh. The club is open not only to Catholics, but to anyone interested. The Newman Club sponsors activities such as nursing home visits, tutoring of grade school children, campus-wide prayer, and a "weekend away" in the Ocala Forest. Currently the club is involved in promoting the 4th annual UT Fast for a World Harvest.

On Nov. 19, everyone at UT is invited to fast and donate the money saved from not eating to Oxfam-America, an organization which funds self-help programs for the poor. Wiesenbaugh says, "The purpose of the fast is not so much to get money, but to make people aware that millions of people are starving."

He is happy with his job at UT, and says he'll probably be here for a long time. He feels the students here are "friendly and tolerant of differences," but also says, "I would like to see more intellectual curiosity. I'd like to see more interest in basic social issues like the arms race. I'd like to see more interest in hunger, and in booming technology and its meaning for the person." Wiesenbaugh feels there is a need at UT for "some kind of forum" for discussion and debate over such issues.

Father Wiesenbaugh appears to be seriously and humbly dedicated to helping the students at UT. He feels his mission here is "to serve the students of this campus, especially in their striving to live a life of faith."

Writing courses inspire creativity

By JODY GROMBACH
Minaret Staff Writer

If you cringe at the thought of another double-spaced term paper and can "compare and contrast" no longer, the time has come to escape the confines of composition and rhetoric and enter the world of creative writing.

With the onset of a new semester, the writing department has developed two new courses for the creative writer: Writing as a Means of Self-Discovery and Writing Science Fiction and Fantasy.

Writing as a Means of Self-Discovery, conducted by Dr. Andrew Solomon, is a workshop designed to help you "examine your own inner uniqueness" through journal-writing. The student will be responsible for two separate journals, as well as a compilation of creative writing.

One of the journals will be for recording intellectual and/or personal responses to assigned reading material. The other will be an Intensive Journal, through which the student will discover "who you are, how you got there, what matters to you, where you'd like to go, and how to get there."

This concept, Intensive Journal writing, developed over 20 years ago by philosopher/psychologist Dr. Ira Progoff, was designed as "a vehicle for releasing tensions, working through crises, and connecting with the intuitive, inner self."

Helen Gutierrez, a student in the women's re-entry program and veteran of the course, admits that writing in the journal is "like talking to an analyst."

"There are no barriers," she adds. "It's like a hand reaching down your throat and pulling things out."

The Intensive Journal consists of 12 different sections, including Daily Log, Dream Log, Twilight Imagery Log, Dialogue with Persons, Steppingstones, and Now: The Open Moment.

Solomon says he hopes entries in these logs will give the student some insight into prospective topics for poetry, drama, or prose.

Gutierrez explains how the journal provides deeper insight into more creative writing.

"It teaches you to write from the inside out," she says. She feels the course exhibits true "partnership learning - you learn from the teacher and the teacher learns from you."

Solomon feels his course provides a "writing community," where the student is able to develop a comfortable, supportive relationship with other class members.

Solomon says writing as a means of self-discovery is a valuable learning experience which is "good for anyone who has a life."

An adventure in Writing Science Fiction and Fantasy, led by Dr. Richard Mathews, is designed for anyone interested in fiction writing in general.

The course offers "a chance to look at a kind of writing that's very popular and has direct appeal to the imagination," explains Mathews.

Students are given the freedom of "writing something that's all made-up."

Mathews plans to build the course around Damon Knight's Creating Short Fiction, a sort of "how to" book that examines the steps to writing fiction.

Several other readings, dealing with matters of science fiction and fantasy, will also be used as guidelines.

Mathews will be using a journal in this course as a means of storing ideas for science fiction and fantasy writing, encouraging students to log dreams or sketch potential characters.

These new courses offer an "escapism" that many students are seeking, as well as writing skills that can be applied to all areas of study.

Wayne Saives

New outlook for J-Board

By TRACY TUCKER
Minaret Staff Writer

Wayne Saives is a prominent new member of the University of Tampa community. The 24-year-old resident director of Spartan Arms, University North, South, East, and West (SANSEW), is coordinator of the university's Judicial Board.

This is Saives' first year at UT, coming straight from graduate school after obtaining his Masters in Counseling/Student Personnel.

The Judicial Board is one part of the university's Judicial System. As coordinator, Saives counsels students who have pleaded guilty, hoping to make them understand what they did wrong, why they did it and the reason they are being punished.

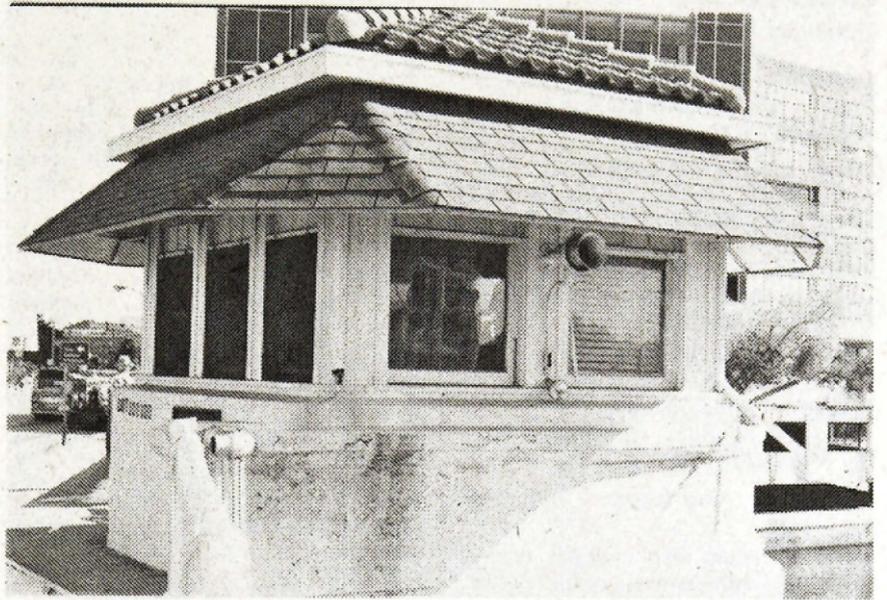

"If students break the rules then they deserve to pay the price, but each case is taken individually and the size of the penalty depends largely upon the student's attitude. If a student is mature and realizes that he has made a mistake then the punishment need not be as strict," Saives said.

The rules are being enforced more strictly but the number of Judicial Board cases are less this year than they were at this time last year, according to Saives.

Saives encourages students to take pride in the school and its reputation. "I think the university is going through a transition period. Students are taking the work seriously and putting up with less from those who abuse the school's property," Saives said.

Saives said his young age enables students to speak with him easily on an equal basis. "Most of the students who I dealt with on J-Board are friendly to me when I see them now. This makes me feel that they have learned from our talks and realize that their punishment was fair," Saives explained.

So far Saives is pleased with the university's progress. The students are pleased with Saives, too. One resident of Spartan Arms credits Saives with the accomplishment of SANSEW'S Wild Bunch, the 1981-82 intramural football champs.

Who's minding the bridge?

By DAWN CLARK
Assistant Features Editor

Three loud blasts from the drawbridge means it's going to open.

The man who operates the Kennedy Street Bridge on Kennedy Boulevard hears this signal anywhere from seven to 300 times a month. He must keep a careful record each time a vessel goes through, and send his reports to the city. Beyond record-keeping, he spends much of his time reading and listening to music.

On Saturdays he cleans up the small white building which has been his place of employment for the past 4 1/2 years.

Not many of the citizens passing by stop to chat, he said. But he prefers to remain anonymous, exchanging greetings with familiar faces, and watching over the Hillsborough River. Sometimes, though, he says he feels like he's "in a chicken coop," and adds, "Everyone looks at you."

He said he is concerned about the safety of students and residents of the UT area. He has seen some people foolishly try to "beat the gates," which involves much the same risk as trying to race a train over a railroad crossing. Elderly people especially tend to freeze up in the center of the bridge when the signal is given and he has to watch out for them.

A car traveling over that bridge on a rainy day can become a mere skateboard if its driver is not alert. He has witnessed plenty of accidents in his time. During the area's last strong rainstorm there was a five-car pile-up after one driver braked suddenly and caused a chain reaction. After seeing such tragic incidents, he recommends a speed of about ten mph in risky situations.

Otherwise, the coordination with boats runs smoothly. He has to judge precisely when the tail ends have cleared completely through to reverse the mechanism. If a crisis seems inevitable, he signals danger with four loud blasts.

He worked for a local fire department before settling down in his current position, and claims the worst fires he saw occurred on boats docked in port.

"You can't see more than a foot in front of you," he commented. "I had to be familiar with the way those boats were designed."

Out of the large variety of ships he has seen cruise down the Hillsborough River, he has spotted a few that were famous. Once he saw Miss Budweiser, and another time former governor Claude Kirk's ship went through.

To work at a drawbridge like the Kennedy Street Bridge, a person must go through on-the-job training, then he is tested for capability in handling it alone.

It used to be called the Lafayette Bridge, but after former president John F. Kennedy's assassination in 1963, the name was changed. It is one of the oldest bridges along the entire river and was set up by the Commissioners of Public Works in 1913.

The friendly keeper of the drawbridge can be found there five days a week, reading his books on theology and philosophy—often as many as seven at one time.

Knowing there are men like him working those mammoth bridges adds a comforting touch to this city, which is growing industrially at an overwhelming rate. And, as the poet W. H. Auden said in his piece entitled "Look, Stranger," the ships continue to "diverge on urgent voluntary errands."

western favorites such as Wanted: Dead or Alive, Daniel Boone, and High Chaparral.

Four movies will be shown daily. Some titles include John Wayne classics like Blood Alley, Rio Lobo, The Green Berets, and Big Jake, James Coburn in Our Man Flint, Tony Curtis in The Great Race, and Steve McQueen in Bullitt.

Wheeler said the station has purchased 1,500 films to initiate their film library, including some newer films such as Raise the Titanic and The Muppet Movie.

"We're looking for films with 'big star' value."

The schedule also includes many programs that were popular with children, programs like Batman, Spiderman, Wonder Woman, Lost in Space, Tom and Jerry, Popeye, and Our Gang.

As a "filler" between these shows, Channel 28 will feature Nooze Report, where puppet characters deliver messages to kids.

Wheeler said the station will be airing shows that Channel 44, the major independent in this market, began their programming with but have since dropped.

"Eventually, we'll pick some newer shows," Wheeler said, explaining that Channel 28 is trying to avoid a lot of sex and violence.

"If another Mork and Mindy or Happy Days comes out, we'll probably buy it."

The station hopes to adhere to a strict schedule of family-oriented shows with "well-established track records."

Covering sports, WFTS plans to carry an 18-game basketball series featuring the Metro Conference that includes Florida State University.

The station also hopes to carry several Atlantic Coast Conference games, a 40-game baseball schedule next spring, and some world class tennis matches.

No local news operation is planned, but the station will offer two of the News Feature Services supplied by Cable Network News, a service out of Atlanta, Ga.

Religious programming, though minimal, will include the PTL Club (7 to 8 a.m. weekdays), featuring evangelist talk-show-host Jim Bakker.

Also planned are Sunday morning worship services, broadcast live from area churches.

WFTS is currently operating out of a suite of offices in the Lincoln Center on West Kennedy Boulevard. The station itself is under construction at a site near I-4 and 38th Street. Wheeler expects it to be finished around mid-January.

The tower will be 1,045 feet tall, and broadcast with a power of 2,340,000 watts, more than any other station in the Tampa Bay area.

Wheeler estimates that a clear signal may be reached as far south as Sarasota, as far north as Pasco County and as far east as Lakeland.

Music review

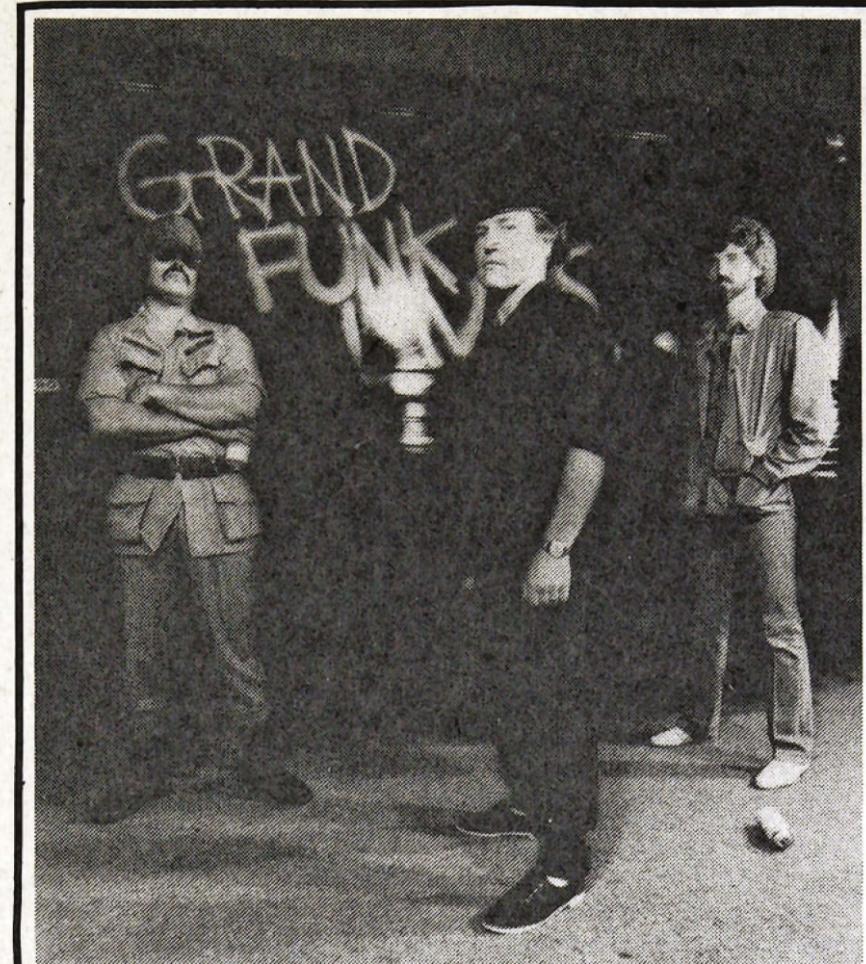

Spyro Gyra

By BRYON HOLZ
 Minaret Staff Writer

Musical excitement filled the air as the superb sounds of Spyro Gyra filled the Bayfront Center Theater last Saturday night. The first of two performances in the area, (this Saturday Spyro Gyra will be performing in Sarasota), this jazz-orientated ensemble gave an enthusiastic crowd one of the most enjoyable listening concerts in the area this year.

Using a perfect blend of musical styles ranging from jazz and jazz fusion to basic R & B and even Latin, the group performed a variety of tunes ranging from their earlier albums Morning Dance and the widely acclaimed Catchin' the Sun, to newer Carnaval and their latest Free Time. Formed back in the mid-seventies, Spyro Gyra is just now beginning to get some of the attention and recognition they deserve.

In concert they brought out the Grand Funk Railroad, loved by millions, and scorned by critics, performed last night at the Jai Alai Fronton. Next week's Minaret will feature a review of the show and their new album.

magic that was left to the mind on vinyl. Whether it be their hyperactive, often ravaging percussionist prancing about the stage or the group's keyboardist bringing a portable solo keyboard out midway into the audience, they established a certain intimacy with the audience that no album can.

At one point during the first of two encores, the group thanked the crowd for their unending support during all the years. Then, as if finally reaching a special place in today's crazy music world, the group was flooded with a foggy mist that seemed to put both the band and the audience in heaven.

The hour plus performance was flawless, the lighting-perfect. But for some reason, amidst a sea of polyester which engulfed even myself, and after paying over $9 for my ticket, I could only think that heaven can wait.

UT Spartans in profile

By KATHY MacKENZIE
Minaret Correspondent

Since the regular season has concluded, the UT Soccer Team now looks forward to participating in post-season play which is expected to get under way on the weekend of Nov. 21. The Spartans' record was 12-0-3. The team's fine play throughout the season resulted in them being ranked fourth in the NCAA Division II and ranked first in the South.

Coach Jay Miller expects good things from his team.

"We started intense training on Monday for the playoff game and then the national tournament," said Coach Miller. "I expect Mike Fall and Peter Johansson will be available to play. But, if they're not, I still feel we can do well."

The following is a brief summary of the Spartans' starting line-up.

5'8" 150 lbs.
Junior
Sanford, FL

Fall, the Spartan's co-captain, has been plagued with a knee injury which has resulted in him missing the last five games of the regular season. He scored two goals and has three assists. Last year, Fall was voted the Most Valuable Player of the team and made the Florida All-State Team. He also played in the U.S. Sports Festival this summer.

MIKE LEE
5'11" 165 lbs.
Junior
Orlando, FL

Lee played quarterback for his high school football team until his senior year when he decided to switch to soccer. 'Spike' has played hard as right fullback and has one assist. During the spring he plays for the St. Petersburg Kickers of the Sun Coast League.

HANS OLOFSSON
6'0" 180 lbs.
Freshman
Karlskrona, Sweden

Olofsson, one of the new members to the team this year, has played well for the Spartans as sweeper. He has scored seven goals and had one assist; three of those goals were on penalty kicks. Coach Miller says that Olofsson plays better while under pressure and has been one of the more consistent players on the team. His previous experience was with a second division team in Karlskrona, Sweden.

GORAN SWARDH
5'8" 170 lbs.
Freshman
Karlskrona, Sweden

Swardh, another Swedish import, joined the team under the encouragement of fellow Swede Peter Johansson. Swardh plays mainly in the Spartans' front line but has played in midfield too. He has scored five goals and six assists, his most recent goal being the equalizer against USF. He has had previous experience on the Division Two team Karlskrona in Sweden.

MARK PUTNAM
5'10" 155 lbs.
Senior
Coventry, CT

According to Coach Miller, Putnam adds stability to the team in his position as stopper. Putnam, this year's co-captain of the team, had previous experience on the Connecticut State B Team. He has one assist this season.

BOB BUTEHORN
5'10" 150 lbs.
Sophomore
Glenell, MD

Last year, Butehorn came to the team as a walk-on. He has played fairly regularly, but missed four games due to an injury. Butehorn scored one goal this year. In addition to playing for the Spartans, he has played for the Maryland State Team.

PETER JOHANSSON
5'9" 162 lbs.
Junior
Vaxjo, Sweden

Johansson, once a member of the Swedish Junior National Team, has played exceptionally well for the Spartans over the past three years. This year he injured his shoulder and missed the last two games of the season. But, he should be ready for post-season play. Johansson was the leading scorer for the team having scored twelve goals and six assists.

CARL FREDRICKSON
5'9" 160 lbs.
Senior
Woodstock Valley, CT

Coach Miller feels that Fredrickson has been a contributing factor to the team all four years. In his freshman year, he was voted to the All-State team. This year, early in the season he was a reserve, but as the season progressed he became an important starter. Fredrickson has scored three goals, one being the go-ahead goal in the game against Florida International University.

STEVE SAVAGE
5'9" 155 lbs.
Sophomore
Miami, FL

Savage, a midfielder, cracked five ribs in the Spartans' game against North-East Louisiana in the Jacksonville Invitational Tournament. Nevertheless, he continued to play through the remainder of the season and scored four goals and seven assists. Last year, Savage was voted to the Florida All-State Team.

TOMMY GRAHAM
6'1" 178 lbs.
Senior
Washington, D.C.

In Graham's freshman year, he was the starting goalie for the Spartans. The following year he lost his starting spot to Craig Scarpelli because of a knee injury. But, this year he regained his job as number one keeper and has recorded five shutouts and a .73 goals against average in regular season games.

ROGER RAMSAY
5'10" 162 lbs.
Sophomore
Tampa, FL

Ramsay, a transfer student from Hillsborough Community College, is the second leading scorer for the team. He has a total of 26 points for the regular season—ten goals and six assists. Coach Miller spotted Ramsay while he was playing in the Sun Coast League for Unclaimed Freight. Ramsay is originally from Jamaica but his family moved to New Jersey.

JIM WILLENBORG
5'8" 140 lbs.
Sophomore
Miami, FL

Willenborg gained international experience while touring with the U.S. Junior National Team in Brazil. This has kept him in good stead. He now plays in midfield for the Spartans but feels more comfortable as a defender. Coach Miller moved Willenborg to his new position for the betterment of the team and feels that he has progressed well in midfield.

DAVE McMULLEN
5'8" 155 lbs.
Sophomore
Tacoma, WA

McMullen, a transfer student from Seattle, has been a great asset to the team. Before coming to UT, McMullen took part in the U.S. Sports Festival in Syracuse, NY, played for the U.S. in the CONCACAF tournament this summer and toured with the U.S. Junior National Team. He has three assists.

Lady Spartans slash Stetson

By MARK ZWEIG and MARY GERACI
Minaret Staff Writers

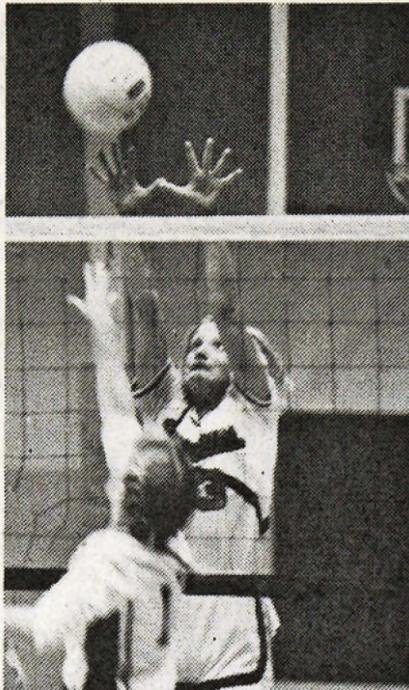

In their last home match of the season, the University of Tampa women's volleyball team overwhelmingly defeated Stetson University 15-3, 15-9, and 15-1.

The game was totally dominated by UT, with fine performances by Karla Garner, Joanne Ebborn, and Joni Vollman. Karla and Joanne, both making over 20 spikes in the match, converted 50% of these into kills. In other words, for each time either of these girls touched the ball, half of the time a point was scored. Vollman gave an outstanding all-around performance and showed tremendous improvement of her already outstanding playing ability.

Last Friday's victory has brought the Lady Spartan's season record to an outstanding 21-6. The team is now preparing for the Sunshine State Conference championship at Florida Southern.

Since this was the last home match, the team gave a special tribute to their graduating senior teammates. Just prior to the game's start, a rose was presented to Joanne Ebborn, Joni Vollman, Karla Garner, and Lisa Turdo.

The match demonstrated the strength and power of the Lady Spartans, who are now ready for the Conference Championship. The backbone of the team this year has proved to be Head Coach Sandi Patton. Sandi, whose leadership brought the Lady Spartans to a 30-11 season in 1980, has really brought spirit and victory to the team. Added support to the team was given by Chris Catanach, a student who has assisted Sandi throughout the season.

The Lady Spartans have had a very successful season. They have worked hard this year, and clearly demonstrated their proficiency and skill in their many victories this year. Through the combination of fine coaching, excellent player performances, and outstanding team spirit, the Lady Spartans have found the ingredients necessary to make them a most powerful, proficient team.

Crew at UT

The silent sport

By TIM VAGEN
Minaret Correspondent

Somewhere along the 3½ mile course the body begins to get numb, the mind delirious, and all one can hear and feel are the commands of the coxswain and the oar pulling through the water.

Crew at the University of Tampa is a silent sport. When students first come to college, they usually have not heard of crew. Most of the students here know of the rowing team, yet do not know of the physical discipline and the mental toughness that is needed to row. The rowing itself, the running, the intense weight training, and the overall concentration are only the beginning of the road to doing well in this sport. The oarsmen at UT train seven months out of the year for the short, but tough six-week season.

As part of their training, the UT oarsmen went to Knoxville, Tenn. for their first pre-season regatta. The regatta was held on Oct. 31 at the University of Tennessee. UT, one of the smaller rowing programs at the regatta, entered five races. In these races, the oarsmen fared quite well, capturing two first places, two second places, one third place, and one fifth place. After this showing, the UT crew shows promise for a very successful spring season.

The women's novice four, consisting of Julie D'Agostino, Jeanne McNiff, Sharon Booz, Melanie Wolcott, and coxswain Lisa Ligon placed a strong first. The women's novice single, Sherry Lively, also placed first, and the women's varsity four came in second behind Purdue.

In the men's events, the novice eight finished third; the novice four, second to Wayne State; and the varsity four finished fifth out of fourteen schools.

"Basically, we rowed well. Our size and strength proved to be a disadvantage to us," said coach Bill Dunlap, regarding the team as a whole. "With a small program such as ours, we can't possibly do well against large programs like Wayne State and Purdue. Aside from those two crews, we were either near or at the top of the remaining schools."

Some of the other schools were the University of Central Florida, Jacksonville University, Tennessee, North Carolina, Nebraska, and Alabama.

As far as the spring season was concerned, Dunlap put it simply saying, "I think there's hope."

There may be more than just hope for the University of Tampa oarsmen as they begin their training for the upcoming season. On Nov. 21 the novice men and women will compete on the Bypass canal in Tampa for the Florida Novice State Championships, where they will meet rival Florida Institute of Technology and other Florida schools.
