

NBC Correspondents To Visit Here

(OPI — Irv Edelson) — In a rare treat made possible by WFLA-TV and Radio, the University of Tampa will host five National Broadcasting Company (NBC) news and political correspondents for a one-hour dialogue with students January 30.

The question-and-answer session is scheduled from 3 p.m. to 4 or 4:15 in the International Room of the University Union. That night the scene will switch to McKay Auditorium for a two-hour public forum by the correspondents from 8 to 10 o'clock.

Scheduled to take part in the UT session are Jessica Savitch, Steve Delaney, Judy Woodruff, Garrick Utley and Douglas Kiker.

Accompanying them will be Russell Tornabene, director of public affairs, NBC Broadcasting Company, and William B. Faber, president and chief executive officer, WFLA, Inc. Faber is a member of the UT Board of Fellows.

UT President Richard D. Cheshire will moderate the International Room session and Joe Mannion, WFLA-TV news director, will be the moderator at the public forum in McKay.

The project is a public service project of WFLA Radio and TV and the University of Tampa to acquaint students and the community with NBC correspondents and the work they do in presenting and interpreting the news.

Ms. Savitch joined NBC News in September, 1977 as a Washington-based correspondent on general assignment. In addition to her reporting duties, she handles some anchor assignments for NBC News.

Delaney served in the NBC News Tel Aviv bureau from June, 1974 until late in 1977 when he was transferred to Athens, Greece.

Ms. Woodruff, who spent a great deal of her career covering Jimmy Carter, was named a White House correspondent in mid-January, 1977, just prior to Carter's inauguration as president.

Utley has covered an enormous range of stories in many parts of the world during 14 years as an NBC news correspondent. Since August 1973, he has been assigned to the London bureau of NBC News, covering the Middle East War of 1973; the Communist takeover of Vietnam in 1975; several Presidential trips to Europe; the Middle East and the Soviet Union; and Britain's troubled economy.

Kiker was named a political correspondent for NBC News in July, 1976. Prior to that he had served as Washington correspondent for the Today program since March, 1975.

Seniors Need To Fill Out Cards

Seniors scheduled to graduate in April or August are asked to fill out publicity cards in the Office of Public Information, Room 200, Plant Hall.

The cards contain blanks for information on students' activities on campus, their high school, names and addresses of parents and the name of the hometown newspaper.

Each year the publicity office is hampered in its efforts to recognize the graduation and achievements of seniors because of the lack of information needed to write a hometown story with substance. Your cooperation in taking five minutes out of your schedule to fill out a publicity card, or to update one filled out a year or two ago, would be appreciated.

April will be here sooner than you think.

Henderson Appointed To Committee

(OPI-Irv Edelson) — Dr. Robert D. Henderson, Dana professor of management at the University of Tampa, has been appointed to the Southeast subcommittee of the Long Range Planning Committee of the Health Care Administration Division, Academy of Management.

The responsibilities of the committee are to provide advice and counsel for the future direction and focus of the Health Care Administration Division. The appointment was made by Dr. Thomas A. Natiello, professor and director, Institute for Health Administration and Research and chairperson for the Academy of Management's Health Care Administration Division.

Dr. Henderson is one of four persons representing the Southeast subdivision.

Florida Suncoast Writers' Conference

By NONA EDELSON

Have you ever dreamed of being another Hemingway, Capote, or Shelley? Well, maybe those dreams are rather far fetched, but who hasn't dreamed of writing a best seller at one time in his life?

The best way to learn about writing is to learn from the pros, and the Suncoast Writers' Conference, sponsored by the USF Campus in St. Petersburg, is an excellent opportunity to do just that.

The Florida Suncoast Writers' Conference (FSWC) is a series of how-to-write workshops that give you a chance to meet and talk with writers in the short story, poetry, science fiction, mystery and detective fiction, writing for children, inspirational, confessions, photo journalism, and article writing.

The FSWC will start Friday, January 27, at 10 a.m. and hold one-hour workshops until 3:30 p.m., Friday through Sunday. Registration will be held on Friday morning from 8:30-9:30 a.m. and the fee for students is $20.

Along with the workshops there will be general assemblies where different authors will speak.

At the end of each day there will be a social hour and banquet. Expenses for these activities are not included in the initial registration fee.

The Florida Suncoast Writers' Conference will be held on the USF Campus located at 830 First Street South, St. Petersburg.

Early registration is January 24. For details, contact the University of South Florida.

Inauguration Date Set

Dr. Cheshire's inauguration as the University's seventh president will take place late in September. A committee chaired by Trustee Scott Christopher, president of Greater Tampa Chamber of Commerce, is now determining the exact date and planning the ceremony. The goal is an occasion of value and visibility, presented at modest cost and without ostentation, that will celebrate the present strengths and future promise of the University of Tampa.

If you or an organization or activity with which you are affiliated could contribute entertainment, work, or finances toward any of the inauguration events, please let the president's office know. Also, we would like to involve in seminars and other programs people of special abilities or prominence who are connected with the University. Please pass on the names of anyone (yourself included) who you feel falls into this category. Many thanks for any ideas or help you can give us for this important occasion.

Statement Of Purpose For The Collegium

The purpose of a Collegium is to address matters of institutional policy in such a way as to enhance competent and rational decisions by formulating policies regarding issues of program and recommending policy concerning issues of practice. In order to achieve this purpose the Collegium will formulate policy that is principally concerned with educational, business, and public affairs programs for which no single structure within the University can or should have sole responsibility. Central to these functions will be the formulation of program priorities upon which budgetary, planning, and facility utilization decisions will be made. The Collegium may also make recommendations that are principally concerned with assuring that the individual practices of the basic structures of the University are consistent with the overall goals of the University and that these practices are efficient and considerate of the people involved. Any policy or recommendation may be initiated within the Collegium but the development and formalizing of the policy or recommendation is to be done in cooperation with the structures of the University affected.

The Collegium undertakes these responsibilities with several assumptions in mind: (a) any action of the Collegium must respect the integrity of the basic structures of the University, (b) policies concerning University purpose are formulated by the Board of Trustees, (c) policies concerning standards of academic practice are formulated by the faculty, (d) policies concerning standards of administrative practices are formulated by the administrative staff, (e) policies concerning practices related to student life are formulated by the students, and (f) all policies are subject to review by the President and, as necessary, by the Trustees.

London Intercession Courses Offered

London anyone. . . .

A unique travel/study opportunity is in the offering for students, faculty and friends who would like to join Professors Rodean and Truscott during their intercession programs in Fine Arts and Finance. The location. . . London, England. Two separate programs (Fine Arts and Finance) will be offered as three-credit courses meeting for two weeks on location in London.

Fine Arts students will visit and attend current performances at such places as the Royal Albert Hall, the National Theatre, Stratford-Upon-Avon, Covent Garden and the Tate Gallery.

Business students can expect to visit and attend seminar programs at such places as the London Stock Exchange, the Bank of London, Lloyds of London, etc.

Sight-seeing and organized tours throughout London, Stonehenge and Salisbury are being planned to supplement the academic orientation of the program.

Early cost estimates (including tuition, transportation, room, breakfast, tours, seminars, tickets) are between $800 and $850. Airline fees must be paid by March 10th with the balance due by April 15th. Early payment is required to insure the lowest possible rates. Those not seeking academic credit for the course will be excused from required pre-travel academic work and may deduct approximately $200 from the total.

Because cost estimates will be reduced with increased enrollment, it is important that students and friends interested in participating in this tour contact the division of Fine Arts (ex. 217) or the division of Business (ex. 413) immediately.

Cafeteria Gets New Look

By WENDY GROVES

This semester, some exciting additions have been added to the UT cafeteria. In November, the caterer, ARA Food Services, brought to our campus a new dining room manager, Joe Nadudvary. He or one of his assistants, Clint Ingram or Gary Foy, will be available at all meals to answer your questions and listen to your comments.

The University hopes you have taken some time to notice some of the physical changes in the cafeteria. All of the equipment in the kitchen and on the serving lines has been overhauled, much of it replaced. Further, new plumbing was installed so that we could return to china and silverware instead of plastic. These changes alone allow us to present a more varied menu and keep the items on the serving line hotter. In addition, the salad bar and condiment table have been spruced up, and we are expecting new salad dressing dispensers and the long awaited toaster for the dining room.

There are subtle changes that you may have overlooked in your quest to get through the line. The serving line itself has added a menu board that we feel will make selecting your meal more efficient. Also, the women serving the food will have a new look and are already showing a new attitude toward the customer.

For the non-boarding students, there have been changes in the snack bar also. We are planning to make this area semi self-service within the next semester and in this vein, have added new, more efficient equipment.

All of these changes have contributed to the quality of the food you eat. What is more, our new manager and his staff are looking for new food ideas to present to the students, so if any of you have suggestions, please bring them in and we will try them out.

I am happy to report that the end of the semester up-surge in the cafeteria helped us retain 93% of our boarding commitment and brought many students back to campus who had previously been eating away from the Union.

Well, what do you think? In a week or so, survey forms will be available in the cafeteria manager's office. If you have a complaint or a comment, please take the time to fill out the form so that we may know how to serve you better. The UT Food Committee will have its first meeting of the semester on January 18 in Room 2 of the Union, and this semester, anyone who may be interested in attending may do so. Notices announcing the remaining meetings will be sent and posted in each of the dormitories as well as in the next addition of the Minaret.

Changes Taking Place

Changes in Rules and Regulations in Residence Halls are now taking place. Dr. Cheshire, President of UT and Dr. Carl Hite, Acting Dean of Students, addressed the Student Council meeting on January 8, 1978. Presented to the members of the Student Council was a policy statement entitled "Obligations of Membership in the University Community." Very briefly, it outlined the rights and responsibilities of the individuals which make up the University community — students, faculty and staff. The emphasis was upon self-enforcement of the rules and regulations which apply to campus life.

The Student Council and the Hall Councils on campus were requested to evaluate the present rules and regulations and make suggestions for changes. As of this writing, the Hall Councils of Rivershore, McKay and Smiley have submitted their changes to the Dean of Students. Upon the approval of the changes, both by the respective Hall Council and the Dean of Students, the changes will go into effect.

The Administration at the University of Tampa is asking that the students be responsible for their conduct on campus. All the rules and regulations which apply to students should be self-enforcing.

Copies of the Obligation of Membership statement were sent out to all members of the University through the campus mail.

Bungle In The Jungle Elephant Kidnapping

(CPS) — Presenting the newest fashion in kidnapping—elephants!

Elephants? Yes, according to the Atlanta based company Munford, Inc. One of their six-ton, 12-foot tall elephants was hustled off by armed men in the Burmese jungle. The kidnappers are demanding $1,500 for the safe return of the animal.

Munford harvests rattan vine from the jungles of southern Thailand. The vine is used in furniture that is manufactured by Munford. Elephants are used for the heavy labor.

The elephant was stolen September 30. Since then police have arrested three men including one they suspect of being the master-mind of the plot. It is not known yet whether the kidnapping was for political reasons.

Help Us Help You

By DR. CARL HITE
Acting Dean of Students

As most of the campus is now aware, a very unfortunate incident took place at Florida State University this past weekend. An unknown assailant entered an UNLOCKED SIDE DOOR to a sorority house on campus and brutally beat four coeds, resulting in the death of two of the coeds. I, and campus police, emphasize the importance of keeping doors locked in residence halls or housing units that are meant to be locked. All over campus we find doors being propped open or left unlocked to let someone in late or after hours. Remember, anyone can come through that door; so please, in the future do the following to help insure your safety:

1. Keep doors locked that are supposed to be locked.
2. If you see a door unlocked that is supposed to be locked, then lock it or get someone who can to lock it.
3. Report immediately any strangers you might see on campus or in your hall. Call immediately campus police at 333 or 334.
4. Walk in groups when going around campus at night or call campus police for escort service.
5. Whistles are available from the campus bookstore and can act as a deterrent when used, get one.

With all of us working together, hopefully we can prevent such an incident as the FSU one from occurring at the University of Tampa.

McDonald's: Friend In The Crowd

By ERICA SHAMES
Minaret Staff Writer

You are making a cross-country drive home to New York; it is lunch-time and the search has begun for a suitable place to eat. Many signs beckon, trying to lure you from the highway; Joe's Diner, Aunt Ida's Home Cooked Meals, and Fred's Fried Fish Establishment. Despite your hunger, none succeed. Then, like a friend calling out to you in a crowd, you spot the familiar yellow arches: McDonald's. Immediately you turn off the road hungrily anticipating lunch.

Have you ever wondered why you visit McDonald's so frequently, realizing that, despite claims of 100% beef hamburgers, the meal is less than nutritious? According to an article in a recent issue of Natural History, the magazine published by The Museum of Natural History, a Sociologist attributes this phenomenon to the human inclination to feel secure within "the predictable."

Upon entering any McDonald's anywhere, we know exactly what to expect: the decor, the prices, even what we will say when the pretty girl behind the counter smiles and asks, "May I take your order?" Not only are the surroundings uniform, but the customers are all basically the same: all-Americans craving the American ideals: cleanliness, prepackaged American favorites of hamburgers and french fries, sterile atmosphere, and low prices. Even the employees are wholesome all-American types. This sociologist points out that applicants with severe acne or bad breath are not likely to be hired.

The McDonald's chain has spread all across the United States and has expanded as far as Europe. Incredible as it may seem, many Americans vacationing in France seek solace and a homey feeling by dining at McDonald's instead of trying an unfamiliar cuisine.

It is interesting to note the clever gimmicks used in the advertising for McDonald's and the image its administrators wish to promote. Ronald McDonald has become known as a real person, a friend who can be met in person and even hired for birthday parties. Carnivals to raise money to fight Muscular Dystrophy were sponsored through McDonald's. Yet the commercials go beyond appealing to only kids to sell hamburgers. McDonald's strives to be a part of every community; they plant trees, warn of the consequences of littering, and promote good citizenship by showing the results of the "hamburglar's" cruel deeds; no McDonald's hamburgers. More significant to the success of McDonald's is the effort put forth in making the customer feel that he/she is the most important consideration. Thus the slogan, "You, you're the one. . ."

It is the familiarity we all crave that makes McDonald's a winner, inviting us back time after time to the friendly place that claims, "We do it all for you."

The Natural Force

By FRANK LEE WILLIAMS

There's "Newness" at Maas, says Bonnie Michaels, fashion director at Maas Brothers.

The natural-wave has hit these stores bringing with it a surge of merchandise waiting to be slapped off the racks. Go see.

It's the Spring-Summer selection—clothes conjured up to be casual and naturally revealing.

The designers have reverted to nature, creating their ready-to-wear lines out of the finest gauzes, cottons, silks, madras, terry, etc., all textured for easy care. Michaels says they'll feel good on and you'll probably develop an affinity for them.

The underlying principle will be separates—they will run the gamut from soft blouses and drapable blazers to dirndl skirts to very tight (pleated) pants.

A volatile mix of familiar ingredients, but a different recipe to season to taste.

It won't be so much the garment you purchase, but the fiber it's made of.

The stress is on the silhouette—billowy shirts and blouson blouses look better on lithe bodies.

Accessories, too, will be natural and of the utmost importance to carry off the season's look. Color will hold it all together—creamy off-whites to dark earth shades with a dash of sunset yellow, orange, sky blue, terra cotta . . . and black.

Fashions in 1978 will not dictate details for you (hemlines, snugness, etc.); they will be the components to make you an individual; men and women. Choose your perspective, dress to suit yourself, but keep in mind the ultimate look should be richer!

Positivism

By TOM BALISTRERI

In the next few weeks we hope to assist you in building a positive attitude about yourself, and about the University of Tampa. The article below, which has already been run in the Minaret, is an excellent way to begin this series.

Take The Risk

By TOM BALISTRERI

"I knew the risks involved. If it went well I'd be an instant success and if it went badly I'd be dead in this business at a very young age. I HAD to try. I wanted to win!! (Jane Pauley, Age 26, Co-Host TODAY Show.)"

Risk. Exposure to possible loss (Merriam-Webster). The trouble with the dictionary definition is that nothing is mentioned about the possible exposure to success!! Too many young people are not willing to think big, are not willing to take a chance, are not willing to take a risk. . . . at anything. Risk means you might win. . . . a study by Hay Associates revealed that those people who were willing to lay their reputations on the line in order to achieve results did win!!

Every day students enter my office, and every day they discuss their high goals and high life expectations. The problem is that most of them do not believe they will ever achieve those goals or expectations. The favorite line of students seems to be, "I can't do what I want because of this, that, or the other thing." My response is, "Don't say you can't achieve your goals, say that you won't let yourself achieve your goals."

Don't blame anything or anyone else. If you want something bad enough you CAN get it. Just be willing to take the risk!!

Mr. Tretyakov appeared with the symphony last season to standing room audiences only!

Viktor Tretyakov's name first came to international attention in 1966 when, at the age of twenty, he took the First Prize in the Third International Tchaikowsky Competition in Moscow. Competing with hundreds in round after round, his playing created tremendous excitement. There were few finalists, and Tretyakov won over these.

The late David Oistrakh, the renowned violinist, then chairman of the international panel of judges, declared: "He impressed everyone with the universality of his style and of his rare virtuosity. It appears that for him there simply are no difficulties."

T.E.P.

Welcome back once again to the students and faculty from the brothers and little sisters of T.E.P. We hope everyone enjoyed their vacation and are looking forward to the "struggle ahead." Well, once again T.E.P. is on the move with the organization of two basketball teams which we hope will finish strong and give us two reasons to feel good at the end of the season. Also, the first of the Greek parties is this Friday night, and it looks better and better each day. We are expecting a good turnout-so look for our posters. There will be plenty of partying and a good time to be had-see you Friday.

P.S. Special thanks to all little sisters (including Andie Weinman) for the new T.E.P. banner and all the hard hours worked on it.

UT Welcomes Northern Crews

By MARGARET McNIFF, Minaret Staff Writer

It's that time of year again when you can view the graceful progression of several types of shells rowing along the Hillsborough River. Eights, fours, doubles, and singles with the school's team colors boldly decorating the rower's oars can be seen leaving the University of Tampa's boat house from the crack of dawn to nightfall.

Who are these rowers bombarding the calm waters of the Hillsborough? These crews represent many prestigious northern schools. Their purpose for rowing at Tampa is to escape brisk wintry months of the north for Florida's warmer climate.

The University of Pennsylvania's women and lightweight crews, Cornell's heavyweights and lightweights, Rutgers men and women, and Columbia are enjoying the excellent rowing conditions offered by the University of Tampa. To these crews traveling to Tampa is an annual event. Other crews coming down are Coast Guard, Boston University, Yale, Dartmouth, Ithaca, and Marietta. These crews will arrive between January and March 18. On March 18, these crews plus the Florida crews will participate in Tampa's President's Cup.

The northern rowers have several ways of financing the trip. The Pennsylvania women and men's alumni organization pays for transportation of shells. The rowers take care of their own transportation whether it is flying or driving. Cornell University pays the bulk of the expenses while the rowers each pay fifty dollars. Rutgers crew members pay the total expenses themselves.

As far as training procedures go, the crews are concentrating primarily on technique work, leaving the more strenuous workouts for later on in the season.

"Basically what we are doing is getting a change of scenery from Ithaca and getting in rowing time as opposed to land training," explained Jim Howe, a 1977 graduate of Cornell who is still affiliated with the crew by helping out with the coxswains.

Tampa's Hillsborough River provides excellent rowing conditions for the crews with its smooth water and seemingly endless distance. The river is superb for the long distance training these crews wish to concentrate on.

The University of Pennsylvania women's coach, Duane Hickling, had this to say concerning the conditions at Tampa: "We came here because it is the best water and the best reasonable temperatures around. This year, I feel, is our best camp. It's a very profitable visit."

Cornell University also came down for the warm weather and the good facilities. "Several of our crews liked it here so we continue to come down annually," commented Jim Howe.

While staying at Tampa the different crews are scattered throughout the University area. The Columbia crew is spending the two week visit in the University of Tampa's gym, Cornell is at the Hilton, Rutgers is relaxing at the Holiday Inn, U. Penn women boarded at Bayshore Apartments, and the Penn men took over the Travel Lodge.

Most of the crews are down for two weeks except Cornell who is down for one week. The daily double practices are interrupted by a day or two off for sightseeing. The most popular sites are Disney World and Busch Gardens. But aside from these sightseeing breaks the crews spend the remaining time rowing both mornings and afternoons.

"We have enjoyed our stay thoroughly. Coaching wise I've got a lot done. We'll do this again in a minute. We would love to come back again next year if Tampa says okay," expressed Penn women's coach Hickling.

"Our stay was very good. Everybody enjoyed themselves," commented Rutgers rower Tom Heenan.

The sight of crews gliding along the Hillsborough is a sight to behold. The graceful rhythm of the rowers can be enjoyed by everyone.

Kropper's Korner

Super Bowl XII, one of the climaxes of the sports world has come and gone for another year. Join me as I reminisce and review some of the highlights.

Pregame and the First Quarter

New Orleans was the place to be last weekend. It must have been some party.

Phyllis George is the best thing that has happened to football pre-game shows.

The battle between the cheerleaders may be better than the one on the field.

Phyllis Kelly did a beautiful job on the national anthem, although nobody does it better than Lou Rawls.

It's a Dallas fumble on the first play of the game. I wonder if this is an indication of things to come.

Morton looks like he's healed his bruised hip.

Four minutes have passed and it has been a game of flawless defense.

Dallas is making mistakes but they are getting away with it.

It seems like most of the refs are wearing glasses. I wonder if this has to do with some of the "goofy" calls this year.

The AVIS commercial is definitely one of the classics.

A quick Cowboy T.D. after a Morton interception.

It's another turnover and it looks like Denver may be in early trouble.

Herreir makes it ten zip. Morton has to reorganize his offense and put some points on the board.

Did you know that James Coburn received $150,000 for the Schlitz commercial?

Dallas gets a break when its intercepted pass is called back.

Second Quarter

Morton has had only eight passes intercepted all year but he has had three today after only fifteen minutes of football.

Morton continues his conservative play even though they're down.

Herrier misses his second consecutive field goal.

After half time Denver is down thirteen. They have to be pleased with that because they're getting killed statistically.

Second Half

Jim Turner puts three on the board for Denver and the Broncos are barely hanging on.

Johnston makes a spectacular catch in the end zone to make it 20-3. I have a feeling, I'm about to lose my shirt in bets. Brian and Nancy are already counting my money.

Bronco cheerleaders shake and Denver scores to make an interesting game.

Another questionable call and Denver pursues.

Weese replaces Morton and Staubach heads for the dressing room.

Newhouse displays his versatility and throws a Dallas T.D.

Landry gets a ride to the locker room and the Cowboys unquestionably become the best football team in the world.

Don't miss Langley and the Spartans, Saturday night.

Fred Solomon, unquestionably one of the greatest athletes to wear a Spartan uniform.

Freddie Solomon, A UT Legend

By TED LAURIE
Minaret Staff Writer

Former University of Tampa football star Freddie Solomon was on campus to visit his alma mater recently. Solomon, who was an outstanding quarterback at UT before graduating in 1975, was drafted that same year in the second round by the Miami Dolphins. Utilizing his superior quickness and blazing speed, coach Don Shula shifted Solomon to wide receiver during his rookie year. He has been there ever since. In addition to his pass catching duties, Solomon returns punts and kickoffs. Having just completed his third season of professional football, Solomon stated that the adjustment from quarterback to wide receiver was a difficult one but he feels he has handled it well. When asked his feelings about the decision to drop the football program at UT, Solomon replied, "I was disappointed when they dropped the program, I was disappointed for the players behind me and the coaches. But I feel I had no control over the situation and I'm sure the administration felt it was in the best interests of the university, otherwise they wouldn't have done it."

Elaborating further on his pro career, Solomon spoke of playing for the Dolphins, in particular coach Don Shula and quarterback Bob Griese. "It has been a pleasure to play for the Dolphins. It's fun to be a winner. Shula is a great coach and a great person. It's a pleasure to play for him. I feel the same for Griese, he's a great quarterback."

Freddie Solomon is a man who takes his football career seriously. "I look at it as a business and I have a job to do. The only difference between my job and any other job is that professional football players are constantly subjected to media coverage and television exposure." The Dolphins recently concluded a strong season, finishing with a 10-4 record and just missing the playoffs. Shula's young team will be championship contenders for many years to come and Freddie Solomon will be a key figure in that effort.

Brevard Becomes A Nightmare

It has been quite a weekend for the University of Tampa Women's basketball team. The Lady Spartans, 2-0 going into this weekend of play, beat Eckerd College on Saturday, and gained a draw in Friday's game at Brevard. A draw? Not exactly, but Spartan coach Betty Lambert pulled her team off the court midway in the 2nd half, disgusted with the officiating and fearing for the health of her players.

After only a few seconds had passed in the first half, Captain Jackie Langley had to be removed from the game with an ankle injury (later diagnosed as a bad sprain) in what proved to be only the beginning of a Friday the 13th nightmare. At the close of the first half of play, both Coach Lambert and the Brevard coach approached the officials and asked them to call a tighter game in an effort to avoid any further injuries. To say they called a tight game from that point on would be an understatement. According to the players I had an opportunity to speak with, the officials called fouls that weren't even there, and by the time seven minutes had elapsed in the second half three Lady Spartans had fouled out. In what proved to be the final play of the game, a Tampa player got the ball and drove the length of the court and scored on a lay up leaving the nearest defender about three feet behind her, and was called for an offensive foul — charging! With the game totally out of control compounded with the absurdity of the last call, Ms. Lambert called her team off the court and went into the locker room. At the time of the withdrawal, Brevard was leading 44-43, and at the date of this writing, the official call, forfeit or draw, is still pending.

In that game, the University of Tampa Women's team was subjected to both physical and verbal abuse, saw its captain sidelined in the early moments of play, had three of its best players foul out on questionable calls, and one player even had a Brevard player spit in her face, but they never retaliated. I think this team and its coach deserve our respect and support. This Wednesday night, January 18, the Lady Spartans will play that same Brevard team in Howell Gym at 7:30. Get behind your team and be there!

In a comparatively uneventful game Saturday night, the Lady Spartans, with Jackie Langley resting her ankle for Tuesday night's game at USF, and with most of the starting team on the bench, took out their frustrations on a hapless Eckerd team, beating them 96-12. Rhonda Huskey led all scorers with 24, senior Terry Ovalle had 20, Vivian Pawson and Darlene Danby, 14 points each, and Jane Castor had 13. The win brought their record to 3 wins, 0 losses, and 1 draw?

Seavey Returns As Golf Coach

Jon Seavey, a December, 1977, graduate of the University of Tampa, has been named head golf coach for the Spartans.

UT athletic director Bob Birrenkott said that Seavey's appointment is effective immediately.

A native of Northeast Harbor, Maine, Seavey lettered four years as a varsity golfer at the University of Tampa and placed third individually in Division II of the Florida Intercollegiate Championships in 1975.

"We're very pleased to have Jon joining our staff," said Birrenkott, who has been coaching Tampa's golf team on an interim basis.

"He provided us with good leadership as a student-athlete, and I expect more of the same from him as a coach," Birrenkott added.

Seavey's first major assignment will be to get the Spartans ready for the University of Tampa Invitational, an eight-team, one-day event scheduled for January 20 at Rogers Park.
