

War Debate Suspension Called For

Lawrence E. Spivak, producer and permanent panelist of television's "Meet the Press", called for a suspension of debate on the Vietnam War during commencement exercises at the University in June.

He called on college officials across the nation to protect their universities from lawless elements and, at the same time, to make necessary reforms in his address on "Two War Fronts: Vietnam and the Campus."

Spivak told the 155 seniors that a continuing argument on the Vietnam War will tear the nation further apart, "at a juncture when we have desperate need for national unity. . . ." He urged that history be allowed to decide the question.

The speaker said he didn't criticize peaceable and rational demands for reforms in schools, "many of which are valid and overdue" but was speaking of the attempt to achieve them "by intimidation and violence in defiance of law and ordered authority."

Spivak also received an honorary doctor of humane letters degree for his contributions to objective journalism.

Dr. Richard T. Dillon, dean of Stetson University College of Law, was cited for service as an educator, attorney and alumnus and received an

Greetings from the President

As indicated in the April issue, the faculty has been examining our standards for admission and retention, and has adopted new standards for retention which are somewhat more rigorous than those we have used previously. They are still very reasonable and should inflict no hardship on students who are truly motivated to secure an education. The new standards become effective in September, 1969, and have been communicated to all students. Special conferences have been held with those who may be affected.

Commencement was highly successful, and we now begin to plan for the opening of the 1969-70 academic year immediately following Labor Day. A new curriculum in the sciences, planned specifically for non-science majors, will be one of the new features initiated in September. I believe this new program will not only make it possible for the science department to develop their major programs properly but will also be salutary for those students who enroll in elementary science as a required subject.

The library is approaching completion, and we have more than reached the half-way mark in our campaign for $50,000 for new books. It is hoped that all those interested in participating in this project will send their contributions to the President's Office with checks marked "New Book Fund."

Plans for the Parents Weekend, November 1 and 2, will be announced in September. This should be one of the highlights of the 1969-70 year. I hope that all parents will make a serious effort to be with us on those dates.

It is hoped that dedication ceremonies for the Merl Kelce Library can be held on October 19. We expect to make a definite announcement in July when we have more specific information concerning the decorating and furnishing schedule for the building.

We have closed a successful year at the University. Now we look forward to another in which all of our friends and members of the University family can participate with us.

Cordially yours,

David M. Delo
