FADE IN TO THE BOTTOM OF A SCREEN DOOR OF THE OUTSIDE OF A BALCONY

MOTHER
Hey honey, hope you're doing well,
just checking in, you haven't called since the funeral.... I know its tough, but you're strong.
Take care of yourself, I'll keep checking in on you.... I love you

It is calm, a few trees in the background wave softly to and from

Begin credits

The door slowly slides open and two feet can be seen.

They slowly walk forward but stop just barely beyond the door.

FATHER
Hey kiddo, hope you're doing
alright, mom's worried about you, but I know you're a tough kid. Call me when you get the chance, love
you buddy.

VOICEMAIL
end of new messages, to replay
messages press...beep

One foot barely inches forward before it stops.

They quickly speed back in leaving the door open.

A few moments pass.

The feet walk back towards the door but stop just before it.

Harsh breathing can be heard, whoever it is is obviously straining to accomplish this task

Tape can be heard before a single foot is placed outside,
placing its heel carefully at the edge of the door.

As they place their foot their breathing accelerates, they do not want to be here.

The person bends down, keeping their foot planted on the door, before the tape can be seen, bright and fluorescent,
being placed onto the ground, just before the foot.

The person quickly removes their foot before going inside,
almost rushing to get away from the balcony.

Title card: The line

cut out to the rest of the city

Directed by:

cars go by, people play in the park, a normal day for the rest of the world

actor:

Cut to inside of the room, it is messy, unkempt, but still has an air of organization to it

cue card:

Back to the city, it is bright, a sunny day, laughter is heard

2 INT APARTMENT LIVING ROOM 2

Back to the room, empty boxes, trash, a clear opposite from the outside

retching can be heard, hollow, from another room

end credits

cut to outside the bathroom, only showing the bottom parts

The toilet can be heard flushing and the sink running

as it all ends the person finally comes out
