Dinsmore for the Birds

If you are not aware of the "American Midland Naturalist", a Notre Dame publication, then you are perhaps unaware of an article by Dr. Dinsmore, a Biology Professor at the U. of Tampa.

Because the journal focuses on an ecological level, the articles entailed are not only informative, but serve as a beneficiary to our environment.

Dr. Dinsmore's contribution dealt with bird behavior, but first let's revert back to some basic Biology.

Symbiosis—when two organisms live together and neither benefits; Parasitism—when one organism lives off of another to its harm; Mutualism—when two organisms gain from one another; and Commensalism—when one organism gains and the other doesn't gain or lose.

Commensalism is the relationship discussed in the article. The subjects in the article are Cattle Egrets, members of the Heron family and their newfound dependence on the cow.

The Egrets, who feed on insects, have learned that by preying from the cow, he attracts twice as many insects, thus twice as much nutriment.

Dr. Dinsmore conducted a control experiment: Birds feeding alone versus the birds feeding from the cows. By using the cows, the Egrets use less energy for travelling and hunting, not to mention that by using the cow, the Egret gains twice as much food.

Therefore, the Egrets benefit from the cow with the cow remaining intact.

The Cattle Egrets, which are originally from Africa, have journeyed to America, which exemplified their adaptive quality to live with Man, almost anywhere.

You're Safe at UT

Security On The University of Tampa Campus

Those are the guys that put those white rectangular pieces of paper known as traffic tickets on your car every other week. They're also guilty of locking up Plant Hall every Sunday thus forcing us poor tired UT students to walk all the way around the building to get to the union.

Yes and they're also the scoundrels that locked the post office 5 minutes before you arrived back from Daytona Sunday evening. Tampa U. Security—what good are they?

While the above may be a little exaggerated there is no doubt that the karma between security and many students is far from harem krishna. What we're going to do here is attempt to show the world that Security does a hell of alot more than lie in wait for student parking offenders.

TU Security consist of 12 officers, 2 of which are female (compare this with the 50 man force of USF). They are, for the most part, either Viet Nam vets or regular vets. They have come here from various veteran agencies, police academies and other police departments.

Contrary to rumor they are not hauled in out of the streets and issued guns. Every prospective TU security guard, unless already an ordained officer, attends a 10 week course at the Tampa Police Academy. Upon graduation they are duly sworn in as deputy sheriffs with the power of arrest.

The chief of security is Mr. Chandler, a veteran of the New York State Police. Mr. Chandler has been security director for two years and has built the department into a tightly-knit highly efficient unit. He will be the first to tell you that the University of Tampa is not Mayberry and that he is not Andy Taylor with a staff of 12 Barney Fifes. Roughly 80% of the problems that TU Security handles come here from areas outside of the university. This is primarily due to the transfer of Plant Park to University administration.

Domestic complaints such as husband and wife quarrels that find their way to campus grounds have complicated campus security.

Servant of Two Masters next on TapatFalk

Though the set of mighty Dunsinane Castle has only recently been struck from the stage, and the fervor of Macbeth can still be sensed amidst the aged walls of Falk Theatre, the UT Drama department has set out to resurrect the frolicking and laughter of last semesters highly successful Moliere farce Doctor in Spite of Himself with a production of Servant of Two Masters by Carlo Goldoni.

This fast-paced farce was written in 1749 and is an out-growth of the Italian Commedia del Arte, the theatre of improvisation. Whereas Goldoni's French counterpart, Moliere, was busy playing the role of the reformer in French society and filled his plays with satire, Goldoni vested his interest in more universal wrong-doings such as evil and greed. The universality of his work is the primary reason for its continued appeal around the world. This play was performed by the Asolo State Theatre of Florida only a few years ago with much success.

The play is a farce, and it is filled with the same sort of "zanniness" and "slapstick" that modern audiences have come to associate with the Marx Brothers and the Three Stooges. Truffaldino (the Servant) is universally recognized by his bright and lively diamond-patch costume and black mask which is the conventional dress of the harlequin in Commedia del arte.

Clements Political Adverse In Life And Death

In the beginning of February a photograph of Dr. Thompson, chairman of the UT English Department, presenting Tampa mayor Dick Greco a banner which read, "Pan, Tierra, Libertad", appeared in the Tampa Times.

Thompson gave the banner as a token of appreciation for Greco's letters of sympathy sent to the Puerto Rican people, concerning the tragic death of Roberto Clemente on New York's Eve.

What Dr. Thompson didn't know was that the banner, "Pan, Tierra, Libertad", is a certified political symbol of one of the three major political parties of Puerto Rico. In this particular case, the political party represented is the P.P.D. or the Pro-Commonwealth Party.

Puerto Rico's biggest political parties are: PPD (Pro-Commonwealth), which in last election got almost 49% of the electorates vote; the NPP or Pro-Statehood Party came as the second major party with 47% of the electorates vote; the PIP or Pro Independence Party (Socialist) came out with a 3% of the votes. The other four minor parties shared 1% of the votes.

The PPD party was in power from 1942 until 1968 when the NPP won the elections with an outstanding majority. In 1972 the PPD returned to power after a very close election. The point of presenting all these facts is that of proving that the presentation of that certain political banner is neither a good symbol of the Puerto Rican people or something to be related to that great sportsman Roberto Clemente.

Perhaps in 1956 that banner could have been an accurate symbol of the people of Puerto Rico, because of their obvious political preference (obvious majority) but not any more.

As for Clemente, he never stated publicly his political preferences. As a world-known personality he couldn't afford to do so.

But, it is well known that he, as that Puerto Rican beauty, former Miss Universe 1970, Miss Marisol Malaret, thought that neither sports nor beauty should be mixed with politics.

Clemente was one of the biggest national heroes of Puerto Rico, if not the biggest in the field of sports. In his case, it was baseball.

In Puerto Rico he played for Los Cangrejeros of Santurce. In the states he played for The Pittsburgh Pirates. In both he made a good contribution to the team.

Today, both his people and his admirers have paid tribute to his memory. That is to fulfill his greatest dream, his dream of building a city of sports for the Puerto Rican youth.

So I recommend not only to politicians, but other individuals to avoid involving Clemente's name with politics, willingly or unwillingly.

Remember that Politics does not mix well either in sports or beauty.

Letter To The Editor:

We Have Created A Monster

An open letter to Coach Fryzel and the heads of a university that tolerate totally irresponsible actions of certain members of our illustrious football team:

It seems that the University of Tampa and its well-meant objective of putting together a major college football program has instead a monster of its own creation. In its quest for top-notch athletes it has come up with some men of outstanding ability and character who are responsible members of the academic community. On the other hand, it also has in its midst a faction of totally misguided, immature ruffians who have no business in an institution of higher learning.

Is "big time" football so important that these undesirable elements can prevail on our campus? Let alone represent the University of Tampa.

There are numerous examples of defiance and aloofness to authority: stop orders being taken off records by coaches; vandalism in dorms; girls presence near McKay Hall evoking suggestive and even obscene remarks and gestures; petty thievery, and if this were not enough, breaking and entering with intent to commit grand larceny. Add to this a general attitude of superiority and a thorough lack of respect and tolerance for the average student's rights and privileges.

This is not a pretty picture of what the University of Tampa football team should be. It is a shame that the conduct of this certain faction of athletes seems to reflect on the team as a whole. The majority of the team is not involved in these shenanigans but they incur the stigma created by a few.

If it is necessary to have a first class major college football program here at Tampa, then fine. But let's quit bringing immature, irresponsible, know nothings here who are nothing but a negative influence to the University.

As far as recruiting, the coaches that bring these types of people here should be a little more discriminating. If the quality of play on the football field has to suffer at the expense of bringing in some student athletes who are in fact just that: student athletes then it can be said that the football program is first class.

The only class this certain faction of the team has is very, very low.

So let's stop the riff-raff that seems to be flowing on to the University of Tampa campus with increased regularity. Too many of the many quality talents on the ballclub are having to suffer because of the simplemindedness of a few.

There it is Coach Fryzel. It is not an enjoyable set of circumstances to convey, but certain recent events that have been perpetrated point up the seriousness of the situation. Don't bring any more of these kind of people here, we don't want them and certainly don't need them.

I would sign my name to this but I would fear physical harm being done me if my identity was disclosed.

Just sign me:

a disgusted UT student

To All Members Of The Academic Community

I wish to extend to all of you my gratitude for the fine cooperation given to my department during the critical parking situation that existed during the fair. Your understanding, cooperation and, in many instances, assistance rendered to me and members of my department is greatly appreciated.

Every effort was made to insure that every space available was utilized by members of the University. Next year, it is anticipated that the fair will again be held on the present fairgrounds. We all hope we can improve the situation even more next year.

Thank you very much,
Medrick M. Chandler

A Look At The Collegiate Sex Revolution

In recent years, a sort of "sexual revolution" has been taking place in our society, initiated by college age students. Ideas and values concerning sex have developed a more liberal attitude and it is being expressed more openly these days than ever before. People are discussing the complexity of the subject, trying to solve the problems associated with sexual relations among people of the premarital age, particularly college students. I went to see some experts on the subject to find out what they had to say, and I discovered some interesting aspects concerning the subject.

In an interview with Father Cave, which I deemed as my prime interview, he mentioned a possible reason why people of college age are becoming so free and open about sex. He said that "our society and culture is becoming more and more impersonal, (like at a University, where you become a number instead of a name). So there is a seeking to have personal relationships as a fight against the numbers." This was agreed upon by Mrs. Singletary, a professor of Philosophy, who stated that she was "against encouraging sex because a person could get forced into something that he/she didn't really think was right." She thought that would be a mistake and that there should be "more sex education in terms of an intelligent approach to the problem, so that people do know what they're talking about." Mrs. Singletary feels this is very necessary because there are so many people who are still misinformed about sex. This could lead to serious problems. There are people of college age who do not understand the responsibilities involved in a serious relationship. Some people take it for granted that there are none, and they end up hurting others, as well as themselves. Most people however, are becoming more aware of the element of love involved in their relationships with other people. They are finding that although sex is a factor in a relationship, it is not the primary one.

Father Cave brought out another interesting point, that "most people who did not learn about love-making from their parents, seem to have more marital problems than people who did learn about sex from their parents." Father Cave had discussed this with a psychologist he knows, and he formed this theory through his experience with married couples. This comes about because, as time progressed, the parent is not up to date on what it takes to make good marital relations which therefore effects the marriage of his child as well as his own marriage. This lack of communication is then passed down from generation to generation and has a great effect on all involved. Due to the openness of sex nowadays, this lack of communication could possibly come to an end with the amount of education children are receiving and frankness when young people talk about it and the gap could close rather rapidly.

The question was raised dealing with the suppression or encouragement of sexual relations between a male and female "in love." Father Cave thought that it greatly depended on the degree of maturity of the individuals involved. Mrs. Singletary agreed and thought "it should neither be suppressed nor encouraged and if one part of the couple is not so willing to engage then the other person should suppress his or her urges in terms of a responsible commitment to the other." Father Cave felt that sexual relations should be "done only when the couple has full knowledge of what they are entering upon." He felt that there were many people who were not well enough informed to engage in sexual relations.

Ralph Barre Rosenblatt

I interviewed Dr. Gilgash on the same question dealing with suppression and encouragement of sexual desires. I asked him if a person's sexual desires were suppressed against his own will, could it make him depressed in any way. He answered that "it definitely could, unless the person substitutes his desire for something else on a higher socially approved level, like sports or art . . ." contact sports sometimes are an outlet for repressed energy of aggressive or sexual nature because many problems are suppressed where sex and aggression are concerned. Sometimes a sadistic nature becomes the occupation of a person as a means to satisfy a very aggressive nature. They may go into a very aggressive work, like policework. This would be a socially approved and acceptable means of releasing his sexual aggression. Dr. Gilgash went on to say that "sometimes the most violent homicidal crimes would be a result of sexual repression."

Suppression or encouragement is not the major question involved. It depends primarily on the emotional maturity of the individual involved. Sex should not be forced upon any person, because that person may not be ready for it. If the persons are emotionally mature enough to accept the responsibilities they have to each other then a sexual relationship would not pose any major difficulties. The musical play "Hair" summed up the situation quite well by saying "be free do whatever you want, just so long as you don't hurt anyone" . . . physically or emotionally.

Dirt Band Cleans Up With New Release

Will the Circle be Unbroken by the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band will go down as one of the great albums of our time. Buy this record. Forget it is country, it's not, it's far beyond it. This is the sum total of music history or a complete circle. Without the NGDB this record would never get bought, but with them it might get the exposure it needs.

In the beginning there was jazz, blues and country. There have been groups influenced by jazz but not based on it. Blues has evolved and produced the Beatles and the Stones. Country kept alive folk and when it was combined with blues it produced Bob Dylan. There have been Back To The Roots albums and albums dedicated to an artist's main influence, but this record is the roots.

Bill McEuen producer and manager of the Dirt Band went to Nashville, Music City USA, to try and bring the founders of two generations of country music together with a long hair group, and the result is Will the Circle be Unbroken. McEuen aided with banjo pioneer Earl Scruggs, gathered Maybelle Carter, Doc Watson, Merle Travis, Jimmy Martin and Roy Acuff. Roy Acuff, who has not recorded in years, sings the way that made him famous in the 30's. Merle Travis and Doc Watson, who rate as number one and two of the living guitarists, are both unbelievable. The session men were: Vassar Clements who some consider the best fiddler in the world, plays on 25 cuts and never repeats himself; Norman Blake and Pete Oswald Kirby, Acuff's sidekick for the last 34 years, both play dobro; and the late Junior Husky plays flawless bass (not bass guitar-bass) on 33 of the albums 37 cuts. Everyone is nothing less than perfect. Most cuts were done in one or two takes, with no overdubbing. The record just flows from one song to the next.

The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band tries it's best to keep up with these giants, but winds up in the background. Without the Dirt Band, though, this landmark would never have come about, and obviously never will again; for this record is a one time only affair. But more than a landmark or history, this album is traditional country, bluegrass, mountain, and progressive country and western blended by the all time greats into some of the finest music you will ever hear.

You've Come A Long Way Baby

A Woman is born free, however, her mind is destined for the incurable social role to serve men as wives and raise the next generation of men.

Social myth bestows the Women with adjectives such as fragile, helpless, fearful, impulsive, and domestic, suggesting that Women exist in a minority group structure.

However, Women have managed to quell this image to the extent that they have infiltrated the world of politics (New York Congresswoman, Bella Abzug and Sen. Margaret Chase Smith of Maine) the military (President Nixon has promoted seven woman to the rank of Brigadier General, the first to hold that rank) Sports (women SkyDivers, Co-pilots and Jockeys) Women Surgeons instead of the usual Nurses-Aides, and she even has her own cigarette, Virginia Slim's.

Woman began eating of the forbidden fruit of the social caste system long before she won the right to vote in 1920. An eminent Indian woman, Pocahontas entered into a new cultural challenge by crying out of her limited culture. Pocahontas closed the extensive gap by intervening between her Indian culture and the Englishmen at Jamestown.

She negotiated the success of Jamestown as opposed to Raleigh's lost colony, and brought food to the upper class gentlemen. This liberal-minded woman converted to Christianity and taught it to native Indian children, learned English, was involved in public relations and even married the Englishman, John Rolfe. Having two points against her, an Indian heritage and her Sex, Pocahontas still managed to manifest human growth by breaking the barriers of a once culture-bound society.

Queen Victoria of England opened the Great Exhibition of the works of Industry of all nations in 1851. This international exposition displayed the latest mechanical marvels. Her exhibits featured mechanical wonders. To succeeding generations, the London Exhibition marked the "Hay-day" of British leadership in the Industrial Revolution.

Considering a Woman's role, it can be distinguished by the housewife, career girl, and cosmopolitan woman. Ms Sensuality or Ms Cosmopolitan is affiliated with merely being cupcakeable to her bedtime companion, being frantically thin and maybe even becoming a novelist.

Then there is the Career girl who has earned a substantial degree in a field and is motivated toward being an employer instead of employee, and not to mention the forgotten Housewife, who makes the world go-round.

Yes, where would we all be without our Mothers; the Nurse who cures our euphemeral maladies, the Counselor who cares and wants to help solve our problems.

Yes, the forgotten organizer, the one who schedules her life to suit her family needs, who organizes our "Home", and who possesses a constitution of iron.

Women's Liberation? Why a woman was born liberated; to fluctuate in at least three various roles at her own will, and yet the best part is that she can still maintain her femininity and pride.

Servant Of Two Masters

The final production for this semester, Servant of Two Masters is scheduled to open March 30 and will run for approximately two weeks. During this time the UT drama department presents not only evening productions but daily matinees for the public school students of five counties.

Acting auditions for Servant were held last Monday but any student interested in helping out with the technical aspects of the show such as with lights, sound, set construction, publicity, should contact Mr. Petti in Falk Theatre. The only requirement is that he or she be free from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. daily. That is a big "only" but theatre requirements necessitate the diligence.

Peyote Produces Wild Indians

When reading that the Arizona Court did not ban the use of Peyote by sincere participants in a bona-fide religious ceremony, it aroused my curiosity immensely.

Because Peyote was not banned for religious purposes, I found that a Peyote cult exists and is supported by American Indian groups of which the Navajo Tribe is the largest.

Members of the Tribe pursue the edible cactus plant as the insignia of their religion claiming it to be the basis for their communication with God, and their cure for all bodily and spiritual ills.

What mystical powers does this plant possess? Basically, peyote is a small, low-growing and hairy cactus, whose flesh and roots are eaten by members of the cult. It is bred in Texas and Mexico. The peyote plant contains eight alkaloids, one of which is the most crucial, Mescaline.

According to second-hand experience, the reactions to the cactus are wakefulness, a sensation of fullness in the stomach, and is known to cause a state of Anxiety.

Why would any man pursue that which causes Anxiety, especially an Indian Tribe? The Peyote cult, which is the only religion which uses a chemical substance to create special psychological states, claims that the "Peyote Experience" is characterized by a feeling of personal significance in which one's self, one's aims, and one's relationships become matters for reflection.

IF a member is depressed, he can ruminate over the reasons for these things and seek in his experience a clue as to whether he is forgiven, needs to worry, or can ever be happy. The most common remark by a Peyotist is, "I used to just live from day to day, but now I think."

Another affect of the Peyote is power. When eating Peyote one can look forward to the unpredictable, uncontrollable after-effects. Because this external agent cannot be predicted or fully controlled, it is indeed a power.

The Indians were hassled at one time by the Navajo Tribal council, who wanted to extirpate the root and branch of Peyote, but the United States Bureau of Indian Affairs held that this might constitute a violation of freedom of religion. I would suggest becoming a member of that tribe before pursuing the unpredictable cactus and unpredictable law.

The Other Side Of the Cafeteria

Is this a familiar scene?

You stumble out of the cafeteria, trying to figure out what that strange concoction was that you just devoured, or you complain to your peers that you have eaten ham and eggs three consecutive days for breakfast, discolored breakfast ham for dinner, and that same ham mutilated in the form of salad for lunch the following day.

Alright, eat another Rolaid, now try to gear yourself towards some deep contemplation, maybe the other side of the cafeteria line.

Yes, those patient victims who have to serve you every day, have it worse than you do.

For instance, can you imagine the ear-aches they must have at the end of the day after being subject to the innumerable complaints about portions being too small, dirty silverware or stale bread.

These A.R.A. employees are always coming in contact with the Mumblerers, who after more than twelve years of schooling still can't pronounce French dressing.

Of course, the monotony of the working-day is lessened slightly by all the games the A.R.A. employees can play.

They have a choice between Charades, when students wave their arms around, rather than specifying what entree's they want, or guessing games, when students stand in line for fifteen minutes trying to figure out whether they want peas or spinach.

Undoubtedly, these employees must have iron stomachs: How else could they endure looking at the heap of trays students leave lying on the tables piled with leftover mush?

Although students do have their justified complaints, just keep it in mind that in such a case as this, the food may not always taste better on the other side.

An Older Viewpoint

After my last article about the three types of students at the University of Tampa, some people were rather upset and thought that there should be a rebuttal or follow up of that story.

Drifting around the campus rapping with different people I found out that there is some misunderstanding of who and what is a Bootstrapper. Gathering information about "Bootstrappers" was an easy task for they were all—helpful, but to sit down and pound out a story was another thing.

My first idea was a question and answer type dialogue that seemed boring. Who likes to read interviews anyway.

Just as a bee flies from flower to flower gathering pollen to make honey, so must a writer gather information from different sources. Rapping with George Sweat, Bob Adams, Roger Johnson and especially George Leaf, I was able to gather information for a story about Bootstrapper.

The average bootstrapper is married under the age of 30, with a few who are older. Most have six to ten years in the service and were enlisted members before coming officers.

There are two ways in which a service member can become a bootstrapper, either under the Bootstrapper Program or the Officer Undergraduate Degree Completion Program.

The Bootstrapper Program is open to those who can complete college in a year or less. They are given a leave of absence from the service to attend college at their own expense. Most receive VA assistance.

The OUDP bootstrappers are those who have a minimum of one year left in college or a maximum of two years. They are assigned here and all fees and tuition are paid for by the government.

For a bootstrapper to get accepted into either one of these highly competitive programs is based on his past performance and how he rates among his peers.

There may be some pressures that he may experience that most students do not experience. One important pressure to the Bootstrapper is that he must become accustomed to college life, for his future depends on it.

He may worry about competing with the younger student for he believes the younger student has a more agile brain. So he takes his studies more seriously and usually winds up with higher grades. The bootstrapper must succeed, for his whole career rests on what he does. "He doesn't have a second chance."

His plans after graduation are assignment to a base where he can best utilize his education in serving his country. It was a pleasure rapping with these men, I hope that what they told me was in fact, factual.

Tampa Security Will Get You

There's more than just that though, since September TU Security has issued over 350 warnings to individuals not to return to the campus areas.

There have been 145 arrests in the park for charges such as drunkenness, carrying a concealed weapon, illegal alien, prison escapee, insanity and drug possession.

TU Security has also rushed to the aid of coronary victims, drug overdoses, malnutrition victims and persons suffering from epileptic seizures while visiting the school grounds. To date no security guard has been injured in the line of duty but some have been assaulted while making arrest, mainly by the husband or wife involved in those domestic quarrels.

Just recently in fact Interpol, the international police information center, contacted TU Security for information concerning a fugitive, now in Paris, who was apprehended here at TU carrying a concealed weapon not long ago.

Security did chalk up a success with the closing of the Fair. Last years Fair brought with it alot more headaches than just parking, in fact 14 cars fell prey to break-ins. This year, thanks to TU's maximum security measures there was only one instance of a car having been broken into.

Despite all these accomplishments Mr. Chandler admits that the parking problem remains a big annoyance to his department. He estimates that 99.9% of the feedback from students and visitors to the Security department is over parking.

As was made mention in the last issue of the Minaret the primary hassel involves those who don't wish to park in the TU lots a block or two from the campus but insist on just about driving into their classes. A very respectable note is raised in Mr. Chandler's firm commitment to fairness.

He believes in no double standard and deals with students, faculty and staff equally. Even our leader, Dr. Owens has come out and found that white rectangular piece of paper called a traffic ticket under his windshield wiper, and he's paid it.

The TU Security force will get you no matter who you are; in a way that is a nice thought.

KKY Decorates Pirates On Gasparilla Day

The brothers of Alpha Sigma chapter together with Tau Beta Sigma decorated the Gasparilla pirates from early in the morning until approximately 10 a.m. We were involved in putting bronze colored base on the pirates faces, and later facial hair and scars were added.

During the final stretch of the parade past McKay Auditorium, KKY brothers handed out ice to the ranks of the High School Bands participating in the festivities.

We have recently held elections and are proud to announce and congratulate the following brothers:

Tau Epsilon Phi

The TEP raffle for the trip to the Bahamas does not end until next week so all who haven't gotten their tickets yet, be sure to do so before the 7th of March. This deal is too good to pass up.

The TEPs have been busy lately with various house improvement ventures. We are planning to paint the house soon, something which has been too long in coming. Once that's out of the way the house will be in top shape.

We are having induction in another week or so and it looks like five bull pledges will become full brothers.

It has been a boring week except for the fact that alumnus Steve Weichselbaum has scored with a job teaching in Brandon High School. Congratulations, Seal, and I hope that someday those kids will learn to pronounce your name right.

Before I forget, congratulations also go out to brother Joe Hordosi who pinned Debbie over Christmas vacation.

Tau Kappa Epsilon

TKE is proud to announce the three winners of the Basket of Cheer drawing. They are first prize; R. H. Johnson from Tampa, second prize; Clete Kijek of Pi Kappa Phi, third prize; Christopher Napoli of Tampa. We would like to extend our congratulations to the winners.

TKE is happy to announce two new pledges to our fraternal bond. They are: Wes Green and Jeff Teeman. We extend the best of luck to these two and the rest of the pledge class.

In the intramural scene, TKE has started the basketball season with a smashing victory over McKay Hall with a score of 40-16.

We like to extend our congratulations to Phil Fauerbach and Barbara Mitchell who were married last Saturday.

Carol (Chester) Schmidt was matron of honor, Bob Brierly served as best man and Dan Ferrazza gave the bride away. The tuxedo's worn by these three were generously donated by Gingiss tuxedo rental on Kennedy Blvd. Our thanks go out to Gingiss and we recommend it to all who may have to rent formal wear.

The University of Tampa Blood Bank which was started by TKE is still not as high as it should be. If the majority of the students take just a little time out to give blood we'll get the amount of blood up to a good quantity. Remember this Blood Bank is for you, the student.

Sigma Phi Epsilon

Attention Intramural Buffs, Sig Ep does it again. Yes, the Red and Violet revenged their only loss in football last week with a victory over Uncle Sam's boys. A thank you must go out to the starting team, Bob Stringer, Decoven; McCarthy, Tom Sundance Sasser and John Arnold. A brief but very felt appearance was made by Bill Couch, Dan Rauh and Mr. Molo. This year's leader is Player-Coach Glen Romero, good luck Glen.

Other highlights of last week were, a car wash, to the benefit of the brotherhood, and Saturday night's "Pledge" party. As expected, many of the brothers decided it was too warm for clothing, bringing about quite a disturbance throughout the neighborhood. It has been reported that one of the brothers is still missing.

Speaking of missing has anyone seen Nick lately.

Cal keep those posters and signs coming in.

Zeta Tau Alpha

Last Friday night the Zetas started off the spring semester with a party. Another is planned thanks to sponsor Jack. Here we go again! The Ice H<sub>2</sub>O tea was its usual except for lack of water and other things in the punch. Jubilation T. Zeta and the gang was on hand for the Informal Rush skit and the girls really enjoyed themselves. Formal Rush is slated for this Tuesday and the ZTA's will have to drag out the white formals for a festive evening. Car washes—well we'll keep trying so hang onto those tickets — maybe.

Delta Sigma Pi

The brothers of Epsilon Rho chapter enjoyed a smoker at the Manger Inn Saturday night.

Faculty brothers present included Dr. Cyzewski, Professor Roberts, and special guest, Mr. Robert Lovely. Dr. Michael Truscott was the guest speaker and discussed the importance of developing leadership skills while in college, and transferring these skills to the world of commerce.

Dr. Truscott also discussed his theoretical, mathematical probability index which indicates that if economic conditions stabilize, with a halt to currency devaluations within monetary circles, and if all other variables remain ceteras parabus, he will again be declared the top faculty golfer in the upcoming University of Tampa golf tournament.

With these inspiring words ringing in our ears, the evening proceeded in a lighter vein. The quality of our official singer has improved over the holidays (he forgot the words), the quality of our official joketeller declined (he remembered ALL the words), and all present congratulated "Big M" who has been on the wagon for two weeks. Several brothers didn't know Big M Drank until he came to the smoker sober.

Thanks to the Minaret for helping Delta Sig recover all dishonored checks from last semester. The check cashing facility is in the black again under the leadership of Larry Turnage and his crew of check collectors. Thanks also to united rent all for the discount on rental of the pistols, swords, and whips.

Family additions were the rage this week, congratulations to the Jim Cannons (a beautiful girl) and the Paul Fronczeks (a handsome boy).

Theta Chi

Our outstanding basketball team won it's first game with an outrageous romp over ZBT. Lead by Tim "Hawkeye" Smetana and George "The Scorge" Sulock we dominated control of the ball.

Paced by such famous front court men as Boo Boo Bezich, Rich "Foosball Daddy" Gaudio and rebounder Ken Wilson they rounded out an unbeatable combination. Last but not least we cannot go on without giving special credit to our sixth man, Mike "Bandy Legs" LaVigne.

The House is coming along nicely. We must again thank Don Amato for his time, contribution and most of all his rugs. Take it easy fans, Peace, Love, Dove. . . So until next week, keep loose and be happy.

Public Information

The Public Information Office will be happy to send out an announcement of your graduation to your hometown newspaper (or Tampa paper). But we have to know where to send it and what to say.

If you are interested, please come by room 320, and fill out a publicity card — if you've already filled one out, come by and update it. No stories will be sent without the card.

Freshman, sophomores and juniors are also welcome to come by and fill out or update publicity cards for hometown stories on your activities and accomplishments at UT. We want to give you a break back home — so give us a break. Drop in. It won't take five minutes — Room 320.

Spartan Golfers Take First Two Matches

Under the excellently superb direction of coach George Halls, the University of Tampa golf team is working hard with a caliber that deserves commendation. Although the nine members of the team are each individualists, they work as one to exemplify their unique team spirit by attending daily practice at MacDill Air Force Base.

The team would like to acknowledge the addition of 3 outstanding freshmen, Paul Eppeletti, Jeff Stuart, and Rick Yuhas.

The first victorious golf match for Tampa was held on February 13 against Hillsborough Community College. The results are as follows:
 Tampa 305
 H.C.C. 311

Individual scorers were

Mark Mezzetti	75
Rich Yuhas	75
John Lazenby	77
Bob Ford	78

The teams second consecutive victory was on February 22 against Eckerd College. Here were the results:
 Tampa 313
 Eckerd 362

Individual scorers were

John Lazenby	75
Jeff Stuart	78
Rich Yuhas	78
Mark Mezzetti	82

The victory was celebrated by the team with a well-deserving dinner at Brewmasters.

Other tournaments and intercollegiate tournaments are scheduled with such schools as S.P.J.C., University of Maryland, and U.S.F.

We hope the team will continue to display such fine effort for the remaining part of the semester.
